These Brown Swiss Dairy Farmers Love To Talk Good Cows

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

PINE GROVE (Schuylkill Co.) — When you talk with William Daubert and sons Ronald and Dennis, you get the feeling they just like farming. And they especially like the good-looking, high producing Registered Brown Swiss cows that fill their free stall barn on Wind Mill Farm located northeast of Pine Grove on Pine Hill Road.

And the nationally known herd that includes classification results of 8 Ex, 59 VG, 47 GP, and 2 G, shows the family's love of good cows by producing a lot of milk. For example, Wind Mill Distinction Elissa VG-88 just finished with 32,563m 3.8% 1235f 3.3% 1091p. Elissa's pedigree traces back to the Maggie cow that was purchased in the early 1960s.

Another good cow family in the herd came from Wind Mill Joan T who recently left the herd at 17 years of age with 217,905m and 8,742f lifetime. Individual records exceed 28,000m, 1,000f, and 900p and Joan T's 2y record was a national honor roll record for the breed.

The Dauberts like to do a little showing too. Maybe the most famous cow in the herd is Wind Mill Eventide Alamay that was nominated all-American as a five year-old. But the world-renowned Lindale Convincer Elain that was supreme champion at the World Dairy Expo in Madison for two consecutive years has close roots here too. Elain's dam carries the Wind Mill prefix. The dam was sold as an open heifer to Lindale at the Iowa National Sale.

"When we sell an animal, we like to take her from the top shelf," Dennis said. "We always like to hear the buyer is satisfied."

The Wind Mill dairy operation started when William was in high school and started to milk Brown Swiss at home on his father's turkey farm. The farm has been in the family for 90 years.

"When I first started, you couldn't buy anything that made milk," William said. "There was nothing available. Today there is a lot of hope out there. Production is

FFA'ers Learn To Manage 'Personalities' At Conference

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — For Lancaster County FFA Reporter Josh Troxell, learning to deal with 9-year-old kids as a camp counselor proved pretty demanding.

With those experiences — including dealing with the demands and questions posed by a wide range of personalities — in hand, Josh was ready to tackle several more challenges:

- How to hold a successful workshop.
- How to deal with the wide array of sometimes conflicting personalities of FFA'ers from all the different county chapters.
- How to answer the questions posed by many of the local chapter reporters.
- How to provide enough learning and project experience for his group to take back to the hundreds of members scattered throughout the county.

Josh had the help of about 100 of his peers, all county chapter FFA leaders, at the third annual Red Rose Leadership Conference at Lancaster Mennonite High School on Wednesday.

Officers from Garden Spot, Ephrata, Solanco, Manheim, Pequea Valley, Penn Manor, and Lancaster Mennonite FFA chapters gathered at this annual conference to help build leadership.

"We want to help them learn how to work as a team within their own chapters, how to promote

Efforts Under Way To Build Animal Disease Fighting Ability

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — After losing its accreditation five years ago, hustling to pull together an effort to combat avian influenza years ago, and not having a definitive plan of action as rabies swept through wild animal and domestic animal populations, Pennsylvania is apparently well on its way to developing a modern, model program for realistically dealing with animal disease.

The system is called the Pennsylvania Animal Diagnostic Laboratory System (PADLS), and it is being coordinated through Dr. C.S. Card, director.

While the program falls under the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, it is really a cooperative effort between Penn State University, the University of Pennsylvania and the PDA.

While designed to address animal health issues, the program has much broader implication for human health. There are many disease which affect animals and humans and up until now, there was no centralized effort to coordinate governmental and academic forces to combat ever-increasing dangers of disease.

The Department of Agriculture has published a pamphlet about PADLS and recently, through the Penn State Extension Service, some of that information was announced.

This past week, Dr. Card detailed the program in an interview. According to the doctor, a former

Northeast Chicken Parts

Wednesday, May 11, 1994

Trucklot buying interest was no better than fair. Supplies of boneless skinless breasts were adequate and traded at current prices. However, buyers became increasingly cautious. Line run breasts were available at several shipping points. Product was offered at steady prices but most buyers limited receipts to commitments. Most buyers reported they were out of the market until the middle of next week and planned to wait for that market to develop. Dark meat items were adequate for trade needs and cleared at steady prices. Wings were short of covering an active demand and prices trended higher.

PRICES PAID PER POUND, ICE PACKED AND CO2 PACKED BROILER/FRYER PARTS, DELIVERED TO FIRST RECEIVERS IN POOL TRUCKLOT AND TRUCKLOT QUANTITIES. ITEM CURRE (W & W/O TENDERS) 210 BREAST - WITH RIBS 96-97 BREAST - LINE RUN 95-96 LEGS 48-49 LEG QUARTERS (BULK) 36-37 DRUMSTICKS 42-43 THIGHS 42-43 WINGS (WHOLE) 57-58 BACKS AND NECKS (STRIPPED) 10-12 LIVERS (5 POUND TUBS) 20-25 GIZZARDS (HEARTS) 30-35 INCLUDES NEW YORK CITY METROPOLITAN AREA, NORTHERN NEW JERSEY, MASSACHUSETTS, CONNECTICUT, RHODE ISLAND, AND PENNSYLVANIA (NORTHEAST OF HARRISBURG). * TODAY'S NEGOTIATED SALES AS OF 11:30 A.M.

Delmarva Broiler/Fryer Market

Wednesday, May 11, 1994

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was fair to good, but slowing. Seller offerings were generally adequate. Live supplies were moderate; weights were desirable to heavy. Processing schedules remained very heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 62 to 74 cents. Trade sentiment was steady. In the parts complex, supplies were somewhat uneven. Bone-in and boneless skinless breasts were fully adequate for a generally light and selective buying interest. Wings were balanced to well cleared. Legs and leg quarters were fully adequate at some plants, well balanced to closely cleared at others.

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, Mo.
Wednesday, May 11, 1994

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY WHEAT PRICES WERE MOSTLY HIGHER AS A CORRECTION TO SEVERAL DAYS OF LOWER PRICES. NEARBY BIDS RECEIVED SOME SUPPORT DUE TO EXPORT CONCERNS AND REACTION TO TUESDAY'S CROP REPORTS. CORN AND SOYBEAN PRICES EXTENDED GAINS ON EXPORT DEMAND AND SUPPORT FROM ENDING STOCKS FIGURES. WHEAT UNCHANGED TO 4 CENTS HIGHER EXCEPT KANSAS CITY 1 TO 3 CENTS LOWER. CORN 1 TO 2 CENTS HIGHER. SOR- GHUM 2 TO 7 CENTS HIGHER. SOYBEANS 4 TO 8 CENTS HIGHER. TRADERS THOUGHT RECENT DECLINES IN WHEAT PRICES WERE OVERDONE AND MOST AREAS TURNED HIGHER. GOOD GROWING WEATHER AND CROP CONDITION LIMITED PRICE GAINS. KANSAS CITY WHEAT PRICES FOR NEARBY BIDS CONTINUED NEGATIVE OVER EXPORT CON- CERNS DUE TO RUSSIA'S RECENT REJECTION AND REPAYMENT PROBLEMS. CORN AND BEAN PLANTING PROGRESS HAS BEEN GOOD IN MANY AREAS BUT SOME WET CONDITIONS STILL KEEPING FARMERS OUT OF FIELDS. EXPORT DEMAND HAS IMPROVED FOR CORN THIS WEEK, ADDING SUPPORT TO PRICES AND FIRMER SOYOIL PRICES STRENGTHENED PRICES. ENDING BEAN STOCKS CAME IN LOWER THAN EXPECTED THIS WEEK AND ACTIVE FUND BUYING ALSO POSITIVE FACTORS.

EXPORT NEWS: USDA ACCEPTED BIDS TO SELL 25,000 TONNES HARD RED WINTER WHEAT AND 15,000 TONNES NORTHERN/DARK NORTHERN SPRING WHEAT TO SUB-SAHARAN AFRICA UNDER EEP FOR AUGUST SHIPMENT. KOREA BOUGHT 52,000 TONNES CORN FOR JULY/AUGUST SHIPMENT.

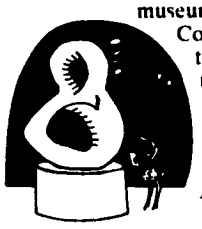
The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

MAY 16-22, 1994

INTERNATIONAL MUSEUM DAY, MAY 18.

FOLLOW YOUR MUSE

Here's a bit of museum lore for International Museum Day, May 18 Museum is Latin, "place for learned occupation," and comes from the Greek mouseion, "place of the Muses." The first waxworks museum came from England in 1749 and included figures of King George II and Frederick, Prince of Wales, dressed in royal splendor. America's first public museum was organized by the Charleston (South Carolina) Library Society in 1773. Today, there's more to museums than wax figures and oil paintings.



Consider these: The Vent Haven Ventriloquism Museum, Fort Mitchell, Ky.; the Liberace Museum, Las Vegas, Nev.; or The Grand Guitar, Bristol, Tenn. (shaped like a guitar!) Museums truly have "something for everyone."

Leisure without culture is death.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Prevent shirtsleeves from tangling in the laundry: button front of shirt and button cuffs to the front.

EARTHWISE

Caustic drain cleaners may work wonders on your clogged drain, but they wreak havoc on the environment If an old-fashioned plunger won't clear your drain, try this nontoxic formula Pour ½ cup baking soda, ½ cup salt, and ¼ cup vinegar down the drain, in that order Close the drain until the fizzing stops, then flush with boiling water Remember to use a drain sieve to trap hair and other objects to help prevent clogging

KEDGEREE

3 hard-boiled eggs, chopped
2 cups hot, cooked rice
2 cups cooked, flaked fish
½ cup cream
2 tablespoons melted butter
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
dash of nutmeg or mace

OPINION

Disporportionate Share

The Uruguay Round world trade agreement was formally signed by more than 100 member nations in Marrakesh, Morocco. But a coalition of farm groups is concerned that the cost of the agreement could fall unfairly on U.S. agriculture.

Some estimates show that by reducing tariffs on imports, the agreement could reduce U.S. government revenues by $14-$18 billion. Such estimates, the groups noted, are highly subjective and fail to consider the potential for increased economic activity, which help create jobs and an expanded tax base.

To make up the difference the Clinton administration has under consideration various proposals, including requiring significant reductions in current farm and related programs, to help offset a major proportion of such revenue losses. This is despite the fact that tariff revenue losses from agricultural imports account for only about 5 percent or less of the estimated total.

The administration has repeatedly assured farm organizations that the new GATT agreement would not require any further reduction in domestic income and price-support programs.

The coalition is concerned, however, that payment for the GATT agreement will fall disproportionately on the agricultural sector, which already has seen significant spending cuts in recent years.

Under the negotiated GATT agreement, tariffs in participating countries would be reduced on a wide range of products. But while the agreement requires countries to reduce their use of export subsidies, it allows them to maintain — or even increase — their support for certain non-trade-distorting programs. The coalition urged the president to shift current funding from reduced or disallowed programs to those that are permitted.

Other agricultural support programs include market development and promotion, export credit, food aid and other related programs. The budget currently under consideration would significantly reduce many of these programs, even though they are permitted by GATT.

We believe that unless these concerns are addressed, it is hard to envision how U.S. agriculture stands to gain as a result of the new GATT agreement.

The GATT agreement was negotiated over a seven-year period. Before it can take effect, most participating countries must bring their own domestic laws into compliance with the GATT agreement. The U.S. Congress may take up this implementing legislation later this year.

Certainly agriculture should not be asked to bear a disproportionate share of the cost of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Watch Potassium Levels In Feed

According to Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent, many of the fresh cow and early lactation problems could be related to excess levels of potassium in the dry cow ration, especially in the weeks preceding calving.

Excess potassium may tie up calcium and magnesium. A lot of this potassium could be coming from feeding forages that are high in potassium.

Heavy applications of manure and/or application of potash fertilizers may elevate potash levels of legumes, grasses, corn, and other crops. So, what is the solution to this problem?

Purchase good quality grass hay not grown on heavily manured or fertilized fields for dry cows. Soil test and adjust manure and fertilizer application rates. Feed anionic salts such as calcium sulfate, magnesium sulfate, etc. to counteract high potash levels in the ration. Balance the dry cow and fresh cow ration for calcium and magnesium, as well as for other nutrients.

To Look At Mastitis Research

Research workers at Cornell University have been successfully controlling some kinds of mastitis infections with proteins known as bacteriocins.

Two bacteriocins which have been particularly effective against strep and staph bacteria are lypostaphin and nisin. In their research trials, cure rates for staph infections have been 66 percent and strep infections have been 95 percent.

These bacteriocins look promising as an effective alternative to the use of antibiotics. Another nice thing about them is, when consumed, they are digested as protein in the intestines. Nisin is already approved by Food and Drug Administration as a food preservative.

To Be Careful Moving Equipment

With spring planting season finally arriving, every farmer needs to be careful when moving equipment on highways.

All farm equipment should be marked with a clean slow moving vehicle (SMV) emblem, reflectors, and flashing amber lights. SMV emblems need to be replaced every three to four tears to be effective. They need to be placed on the tractor and any trailing equipment.

When traveling major highways, have someone follow you in a car or truck with flashing lights. When crossing busy roads, have someone stand lookout and help you in making the crossing.

Taking a little time to be safe could prevent a very costly and injury producing accident.

Farm Forum

Editor:

The page one article, "High Production Agriculture Can Save The Planet," on May 7 was just the advice the American farmer needs: produce more by spending more for high-tech inputs.

Former U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz told the American farmers, "get big or get out." Many did get bigger and soon got out — involuntarily, of course.

I just cannot comprehend the twisted logic of urging farmers to produce more in times of declining market prices. All that I can see is the farmer working harder, handling more product, and getting deeper into debt.

I recall as a lad, before World War II, a local bakery delivered bread to our door (on the farm) at 10 cents a loaf — and a larger loaf than we buy today. Wheat sold at my uncle's mill for 90 cents per bushel. One bushel of wheat bought nine large loaves of bread. Today, it will buy about two and a half at the chain store grocery shelf.

(Back then) one thousand bushels of wheat would pay for a good two-plow tractor. Today it will take the same amount to buy a good medium-sized lawn tractor.

Yes, of course we produce more, but we pay much more for inputs, for taxes, for hired labor, for normal living expenses, and for our equipment and vehicles, not even to mention the land costs, which is our factory.

The question is, has our quality

THOSE ELEMENTAL SPIRTS

THOSE ELEMENTAL SPIRITS

Background Scripture:
Galatians 4:8-31
Devotional Reading:
Titus 2:11-13, 3:1-8

If I had been Paul I probably would have put off writing the Church at Galatia as long as I could. It was one of those communications most of us would rather not have to make. Even forthright Paul seems to be struggling in this letter. This is a church with whom he always enjoyed a good relationship. They had treated him most kindly during his missionary stay with them: ". . . though my (physical) condition was a trial to you, you did not scorn or despise me, but received me as an angel of God . . ." (4:14).

Most of us would rather remain quiet and maintain the relationship than speak up and risk its disintegration. But Paul knew the risk was worth it: he had to tell the Galatians the truth about what was happening to their faith. "Have I become your enemy by telling you the truth?" he asks (4:16). Every preacher knows that is a risk he or she must take. So, it is a risk that all Christians must take. To hide or blunt the truth for the sake of keeping the esteem of others is one of the worst mistakes we can make. A friendship that cannot stand the truth is not a friendship. Now, that doesn't mean we have to run all over town telling friends and acquaintances "truths" that buried inside give us moral indigestion. Paul will at another place say "speaking the truth in love. . . "(Ephes. 4:15) although in Galatians that is not explicit, it is certainly implicit. Paul is speaking the truth in love. It is love that compels him to say, "O foolish Galatians!" (3:1).

ELEMENTAL SPIRITS

It is also love for them that motivates him to ask ". . . how can you turn back again to the weak and beggarly elemental spirits" (4:9). These are the lesser gods and powers they once worshipped. That doesn't mean they have officially renounced God in Christ, but that while hanging on to Christian beliefs they have gone back to depending on some of the powers of their past, too. In a sense, they have made the equation "Christ+" but Paul tells them that when you add these "elemental spirits" to Christ, you subtract Christ from the equation entirely.

Why did the Galatians fall away from the gospel that Paul had preached to them? Answer: for the same reason we do. It is easier to believe and trust in human things and systems that we can see, than in a Christ we can't see. The problem is not just that the Galatians had added some old "elemental spirits" to their Christianity, but that we all do. We devise rituals, symbols, denominations, architecture, creeds, dogmas and polities to give us the assurance and security that we fail to achieve with our faith. Like the Galatians we all add extras to our Christianity as crutches.

THOSE CRUTCHES

Of course, it would be wonderful if none of us ever needed any of those crutches, but most of us feel vulnerable without them. The problem is not that we have Christ plus a few crutches, but that our crutches leave no place for Christ. "You observe days, and months, and seasons, and years! I am afraid I have labored over you in vain" (4:10). There is nothing wrong with our Christian seasons and special observances so long as they do not become a substitute for Christ.

I don't know of any crutches that we add to Christ that don't come mostly from our humanity. They are rituals designed by humans. Creeds invented by humans. Polities that arise from human minds. Dogmas that speak more of the human ego than the Divine presence. We cling to our own "elemental spirits" with an arrogance that shuts Christ out. And this we do generally "in the name of Christ."

Here's the deal: you can be a slave to the "elemental spirits" or a servant of Christ.

You decide.

While most lenders have barely scratched the surface in agriculture, we've gone a bit further.

Fact is, you can explain your needs to some bankers until you're blue in the face and chances are they still won't understand. Farm Credit loan officers, on the other hand, have been through the most comprehensive ag lending training program in the nation. And many have farm backgrounds themselves.

They can approve loans for just about any farm need from land to equipment. And since a committee isn't necessary for most decisions, loan approval is easy and fast.

Stop by and talk with your Farm Credit loan officer.

A Full Season Of Grass Control In Every Micro-Capsule.

If you could look inside a micro-capsule of Partner® herbicide, you'd see something remarkable. A full season's worth of grass control plus the added bonus of superior crop safety.

TIMED-RELEASE, SEASON-LONG GRASS CONTROL IN CORN AND BEANS.

Because of its unique encapsulated formula, Partner "meters out" grass control throughout the growing season. The kind of effective preemergent control you need to stop yield-robbing grasses like foxtails, fall panicum and barnyardgrass.

Plus, the timed-release action of Partner provides maximum crop safety. Especially when young plants are most susceptible to herbicide stress.

CONVENIENT DRY FORMULATION MIXES QUICKLY AND EASILY.

Unlike other grass herbicides, Partner comes in an easy-to-handle dry formulation. And while it mixes quickly and completely in your tank, there are no meters to mess with, no pumps to replace and no containers to rinse.

This year, ask your dealer for timed-release Partner herbicide from Monsanto.

Efforts Under Way To Build Animal Disease Fighting Ability

practicing dairy veterinarian, many hopes of an aggressive, preventative animal health program depend on how well cooperation and funding continue to support the young program.

The benefits of such an undertaking are many and the implications for human health are great. The reason for the need of such a program are evident.

Background

During the mid-80s, there were several disease problems that were identified in the state. The one that had the most impact was avian influenza, according to Card.

"And then it became apparent that there was a fairly high incidence of Johne's disease in cattle," he said. "Prior to that, we had a problem with tuberculosis, actually it was avian T.B. but it was affecting swine. Then psuedorabies in swine. All of these diseases are relatively difficult to control, without good laboratory diagnosis and continued testing and surveillance.

"At the time, I was at Penn State, department head of veterinary science, and several of us had made the suggestion at that time — inlcuding the faculty, the dean of the vet school at the University of Pennsylvania — and said we should really pull together these resources we have, because we had people up there at Penn State who were good at various types of diagnostic activities.

"(University of Pennsylvania) had people who were good at various types of diagnostics, and of course Summerdale has a somewhat different approach, because they do a lot of import and export testing and a lot of regulatory testing, so they do a lot of high volume tests that are done rapidly," Card said.

"So each lab had a different emphasis.

"Suggestions were made and I think a white paper was written at New Bolton that suggested that was a way that we might go to make more effective the resources present in the state.

"And that's what happened. So the act was written, passed in 1988, as legislation, and was enacted in 1989, signed into law.

"At that time, they appointed commissioners — six farmers, three vets, four legislators (the political minority and majority chairmen of the Senate and House Agricultural and Rural Affairs committees), and the secretary of agriculture as the designated chair of the Animal Health Commission.

"The verbiage in the enactment was that they wanted to develop a tripartite lab system, pulling together or integrating the resources of the Penn State Universtiy, University of Pennyslvania and Summerdale (the PDA diagnostic lab). That was the main objective when I came here almost two years ago," Card said.

"Secondly, they wanted to develop a stronger research focus on animal disease by trying to attract external funding, from other than the state line funding that comes from PDA, they wanted an integration of research activities, evaluation of results and dissemination of information.

"So, what they wanted really was a system that would look at research in animal health in the state and make it more available to people who could use it, and thus provide more knowledge for farmers.

"The third was field studies, field investigations and disease surviellance," Card said.

According to the director, the law also called for the development of a "cadre" of scientists from Penn State, University of Penn, or Summerdale to "intervene on a more scheduled basis in disease crisis."

"They wanted us to become aware of disease processes that were going on in domestic animals in the state, and then to intervene on a planned basis rather than reactionary."

There were three major responsibilities, according to Card. He said the goals were to first strengthen the system, build the diagnostics program, which had received little attention since it was constructed during the 1950s, and getting more people out in the field

PDA Publishes Johne's Disease Pamphlet

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — While the Animal Health and Diagnostic Commission of the state Department of Agriculture is attempting to bring the animal diagnostic laboratory system up to a modern level, it is also actively working to combat animal disease now.

This week a pamphlet was printed by the PDA that combines information about one of the most worrisome diseases to the dairy industry, Johne's Disease.

The text of the pamphlet, distributed by the PDA, was prepared by R.H. Whitlock, L.J. Hutchinson, and R.W. Sweeney, of the Pennsylvania Johne's Research Team, and C. Rossiter, of Cornell University in November last year.

According to the text, the disease is caused by Mycobacterium paratuberculosis, and it was first identified by Dr. Heinrich Albert Johne. It is slow-growing, requiring 14 weeks to grow under ideal conditions and it affects cattle, sheep, goats, deer, llamas, buffalo and other ruminants, such as whitetail deer.

It can be carried without symptoms for two to several years after infection. Infection can come from birth or an infected environment.

Calves can get it from dams while in the uterus, from ingesting pieces of manure, or from the teat or udder of a cow.

If one shows signs of it — normal appetite, but weight loss and diarrhea — the authors of the pamphlet state that, "15-20 other animals are likely infected. The clinicl case represents only the 'tip of the iceberg' of Johne's infection. However, only 40-50 percent of all infected cattle can be detected with even our most sensitive (test).

According to the experts, if 25 to 30 animals are test positive on a single herd test of 100 adults, it suggests that probably 50 percent or more are infected.

Estimates are that it may cause a loss of about $5.8 million per year to the Pennsylvania dairy industry, and it is also prevelant in other large dairy states, according to researchers.

And while calves born with it would only show the disease after they are at least two years old, and can represent a significant economic loss to dairy farmers, the researchers state that having it discovered on a farm doesn't necessarily mean the end of business.

The following is that portion of the pamphlet that tells about managing a herd for Johne's control. The full pamphlets should be available through the state Department of Agriculture, and also through the local extension office soon.

Managing Johne's

How is Johne's disease controlled on the farm?

The general strategy: There is no treatment for Johne's disease.

The key to preventing, controlling and eliminating Johne's in a herd is MANAGEMENT.

Testing is a valuable tool to evaluate the extent of the infection, to identify infected animals, determine the intensity of a control program, and to monitor progress of control efforts.

The general strategy for controlling infection is to identify and adopt appropriate management and sanitation procedures for the farm that will best accomplish three main goals:

1. Prevent highly susceptible newborn calves and young animals from ingesting manure from infected adults, be it from the dam, the environment, or the feed (or water).

2. Prevent all other susceptible animals from the gesting low levels of infected manure, especially by contamination of feed and water.

3. Reduce the total farm exposure level to Microbacterium paratuberculosis by removing the bacteria from the environment and reducing the number of infected animals that are shedding the bacteria.

Goals one and two are achieved by sanitation and accepted good management practices, which benefit the farm as a whole.

Goal three is accomplished by more rigorous sanitation and testing and culling specifically for Johne's disease.

For a given level of infection, detecting and culling infected animals early in the disease will speed the rate at which Johne's is reduced or eliminated from a herd.

Specific recommendations: The specifics and intensity of a Johne's disease control strategy in cattle will vary with the individual farm situation. To be relevant and effective it must be designed to fit the immediate and future goals of the farm, and available resources.

Many specific methods can be used to accomplish the three main goals, but the most effective and practical measures to break the cycle are outlined.

• Management of newborn calves and young animals is critical and is the most effective place to put the effort:

Calves should be born in an area that is dry, clean of manure, and well bedded. Areas used only by one or a few animals at a time and for maternity ONLY should be the goal. Clean tests and udders are a must.

The most effective control measure is to remove newborn calves from the dam and maternity area immediately, thus ELIMINATING the chance to ingest manure in attempts to find the udder and nurse.

Feed newborns colostrum, ideally within one to two hours, from only healthy appearing dams, who are less likely to pass M. paratuberculosis into the udder and milk.

Milk replacer eliminates the risk of possible infection from feeding whole or pooled milk to calves. Replacer should be seriously considered especially in herds with significant infection.

Young calves and heifers should be housed separate from adults and should have no direct contact with manure from adult cattle. Separate facilities are ideal but sections protected by partitions, dry alley-ways or buffer zones, or low traffic zones are effective.

Do NOT contaminate feed or feed mangers with manure from feet or equipment.

• Management to prevent low levels of exposure in all older animals is important:

Prevent manure contamination of feed and waterers. DO NOT use the same loader or equipment to clean manure and to load feed.

DO NOT walk in the feed bunks. Eliminate or fence animals out of natural water sources that they drink, that also are slow moving or stagnant, and collect run-off containing manure that animals stand in.

• Identifying and removing infected animals and their manure is necessary to reduce the risk of continued exposure for ALL animals:

Test the herd to identify infected animals that are, or probably will be shedding the bacteria. Based on evaluation of results, infected animals, should be culled as heavily as economics permit.

The most severe should be culled first.

An initial test of the whole herd followed by aggressive culling is very effective in initially reducing the prevalence in the herd. Appropriate management should be started at the same time.

Testing and culling, combined with management, will control Johne's disease more effectively and in less time than partial culling and management or either alone.

Frequency of testing and culling will depend on what is practical for the farm.

The simplest and most effective approach to take in any infected herd is to manage all animals as if they are infected and as if all manure is guilty.

This management attitude works all the time, and is especially important if testing and early culling is not practical.

Attempt to recognize and cull animals suspicious with clinical signs, earlier, before they further contaminate facilities and lose salvage value.

These animals are shedding billions of organisms each day. If uncertain, ISOLATE or cull anyway, and test to confirm for your knowledge.

Sanitation has no substitute. Remove manure as thoroughly and as often as possible. Always strive for more often. Spread manure on cropland, not on pasture to be harvested or grazed the same season.

• Reduce the risk of introducing infected animals into the herd, especially when elimination of the infection is the goal:

Be cautious and investigate animals to be purchased. Purchase animals from test negative herds, herds with no history of Johne's and/or farms that look clean.

Reduce risk by prior testing with serology or by fecal culture immediately when animals arrive.

The goals of a Johne's Disease control program are several.

In herds with low to moderate infection (1 percent or fewer clinical cases per year), wise use of a combination of testing, culling and management can be expected to reduce the clinical disease to zero within 1 to 3 years and most infection in 5 to 7 years.

Thus, as the herd turns over, each succeeding generation will have fewer infected animals, eventually all of which will be non-shedders.

Finally, the infection will be eliminated.

Complete elimination of infected cattle is likely to take many years after Johne's disease becomes invisible in the herd. Preventive management should remain in place otherwise Johne's disease is likely to recur.

With repeated negative herd tests, herds can qualify for paratuberculosis test negative certification status in PA and NY. These state programs are consistent with the National Paratuberculosis Certification Program Guidelines adopted by the USAHA, November 1993.

Herds with more severe widespread infection will require aggressive control programs and many years to eliminate Johne's disease. However, a practical control program and sound herd management can be expected to eliminate clinical disease in these herds and reduce the economic impact of Johne's in the herd to a minimum.

to find out what was really going on with animal health.

According to the Card, getting funding is always a problem, but since there is so much at stake commercially and economically, there is some support.

"Federal funding is always difficult to come by," Card said, adding that commercial interests and producer-associations are being sought to help keep the system developing.

"Just today, (a professor) from Penn State called," Card said. "He and a faculty member from New Bolton are going to apply for funds from the National Pork Producers Council, applying for funding to look at problems they think are present in hogs."

According to Card, the animal health scientists are seeking money so it can be matched with government funds and devote them toward the health of the swine industry.

"That's how we need to go about this thing," Card said. "We need to identify those areas, have some funding available so that we can provide a match."

The most expensive portion of the entire program are attracting well-trained, reliable people into the system and that requires consistant adequate funding, according to Card.

He said that the colleges are planning to employ students, graduate and some outstanding undergraduate students, who would be willing to work for less money than would be required in the private sector, in exchange for the opportunity to build expertise under a program and people who are recognized throughout the industry.

This portion of the program is necessary to bring perspective to whatever animal health problem that happens to be dectected through the laboratory.

"The diagnostic lab may give us an indication of what the problem is out there — the pathogen, things of that nature," Card said. "But the investigation group will be out there looking at problems that exist, and how many problems have been a cause for this animal health problem. And finally, we may find some things in there, where we need to do some research. It may be some basic research, it may be applied.

"But then we have the option of going back, again with our group of people and developing programs between (University of Pennsyvlania and Penn State) to solve these problems in whatever the disease situation may be," he said.

The choice for Pennsylvania to adopt such a program is little. Agriculture is the leading industry in the state and one that is still growing. Even though animal health issues have long been allowed to sit on the sideline in favor of more popular political issues of the day, there is an apparent turning point, where Pennsylvania is put at risk.

"The cost, the worth of animals today is becoming so increasingly high that you really can't afford to lose too very many, or you're out of the ballgame," Card said.

"And what we need to do is to intercede and control rather than move in, on a reactive basis, to treat the disease." Card said. "We're talking about a health maintenance system using those components."

Level of Expertise

According to Card, Pennsylvania is not alone in its inability to combat some serious animal health problems, but the new cooperative system, once in full operation, will help fight some of these problems which actually pose serious threats to human health.

As an example, Card said that Johne's Disease, a difficult, widespread disease in ruminants across the nation, can be battled better under a coordinated effort.

"Johne's is similar to T.B.," Card said. "They are bacterial organisms. The diagnosis of TB, and Johnnes is becoming increasingly difficult," he said.

"We get false positives, and we get false negatives. We can follow cows and culture them, periodically culture their fecal material, and in many cases they'll be negative. But all of a sudden down here, on the fourth or fifth culture, it's positive. And we may not get a positive blood sample on that cow either," he said.

"So, there is a need to develop a more sophisticated diagnostic capability for T.B. and Johne's Disease," he said.

"In the southewestern part of the country, in what they call the El Paso milkshed, there's a huge number of dairy cows that provide milk. Some goes to Mexico, a lot of it comes into Texas.

"They have a huge problem with T.B. down there, and one of the problems is ... they can pick out some very overt reactions, but it's these subtle ones. If you're going to clean up and you don't get the subtle ones, you're not going to clean up.

"And that's the problem we have with Johne's, so, they're looking at different types of immune responses and the measurement of those immune responses as more sophisticated diagnostic tools for some of these diseases," Card said.

It may seem hard to believe, that in this day with all the technology available, that a state agriculture department is still using facilities built in the 1950s. But the problem is deeper than political expedience.

According to Card, there is adequate knowledge and technology — it's just that profit-motive is not strong enough to develop these technologies.

Ability of the consumer (farmer) to pay, as well as prevelance of diseases, can dissuade animal health companies from fully developing a product or technique that may be greatly needed, but that won't provide a large profit, over the cost of research.

Ag Secretary Wolff Promotes Pa. Products

CHICAGO — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff met with U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Mike Espy at the Food Marketing Institute/U.S. Food Export Show recently in Chicago.

Espy attended the show at the invitation of the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture (NASDA). He updated delegates about the USDA reorganization, the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), and the federal Market Promotion Program.

Buyers from 100 countries attended the FMI/U.S. Food Export Show May 1-4 in Chicago. As a result of NAFTA, there was a higher level of participation by buyers from Mexico and other Latin American countries.

Wolff led a delegation of 11 Pennsylvania companies that displayed a variety of quality Pennsylvania food products in a special Pennsylvania pavilion that was one of the largest at the show.

Pennsylvania products included ice cream, yogurt, frozen dessert novelties, bottled water, frozen pierogies, chocolate candy, processed meat products, canned vegetables, tomato products, processed dry beans, snack foods, chocolate chips, fruit drink mixes, cocoa powder, sweetened coconut, pancake mix, Belgian waffle mix, gourmet soups, and pet supplies.

Penn State Sets Satellite Program For Dairy Ag Professionals

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Personnel from Penn State's Departments of Veterinary Science and Dairy and Animal Science, along with other extension specialists are planning a one-day satellite program which is scheduled for June 2. This program, called "Dairy On-Farm Problem-Solving: The Process" will provide a continuing education opportunity to those persons who advise dairy producers at the farm level. This includes farm consultants, county extension agents, feed company representatives and veterinarians.

The purpose of this program is to introduce ag-professionals to a systematic approach when identifying, quantifying, and developing responses to on-farm problems. This program will provide introductory techniques in problem-solving. Participants will be encouraged to expand their thinking and work cooperatively with other ag-professionals when examining farm problems.

The program will be divided into five segments. The problem-solving process will be the foundation in which additional information, including records, facilities, animal inspection, and feed delivery systems, will be based. Practice activities will allow for an opportunity to apply these principles. A visit to a local dairy farm will also facilitate hands-on experience. Time will be available for question and answer periods.

Penn State is charging $25 to cover the cost of the seminar notebook. Some down-link sites will have a local registration charge to cover lunch, and transportation costs to and from the farm.

Several regional county extension offices will support this program by hosting down-link sites within Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey. Contact the down-link site coordinator to register at the down-link site closest to you.

The list of site-coordinators accompanies this article.

These Brown Swiss Dairy Farmers Love To Talk Good Cows

going up. There are quite a number of 30,000 lb. milk, Brown Swiss cows now.

"We only got $5 for milk at first, but feed was only $75 a ton. Actually, in the 1970's I could pay the bills better than we can now.

The Dauberts ship milk to Guers Dairy at Tumbling Run. They have high Class 1 utlization and received a recent top price of $15.50 per hundred.

On the subject of BST, the Dauberts believe you can get more milk out of the cows, but they are not convinced you will make any more money. They say it takes a lot more management, and Dennis sees a big problem in bull proofs.

These bull proofs can be manipulated so badly with BST it's not even funny," Dennis said. "We have talked to people in Ohio who are getting cows to respond with an increase of 10 to 30 pounds of milk. Herdmate comparisons would be easy to manipulate with BST. Just give the bull's daughters BST and not the herdmates."

William has been a director of the National Brown Swiss Association in the 1980's. Exports from the herd have gone to South America, Mexico and Japan. Five bulls have been purchased or leased to studs.

An on-going embryo flushing program of the best cows continues. The herd is mostly homebred, and many animals trace back to three major cow families. But the Dauberts like to buy four or five animals each year to bring new bloodlines into the herd.

Ronald said the genetics base in the Brown Swiss breed is now adequate for good breeding capability. "The smaller genetic base hampered the breed in earlier times," he said. "But in the last 10 years they have been sampling a lot more young bulls and doing a good job of it, especially in artificial breeding.

"And inquiries from potential buyers continue to create an adequate market for excess breeding animals in the herd. Brown Swiss auctions usually draw good crowds of dairymen, and cows bring good prices."

As for the milk and beef checkoff money that is taken from their income checks, the Dauberts don't like to give up the money, but they think it is going for a good cause. "I like the commercials and other promotional programs I see," Ronald said. "I think they are doing a good job."

But other overhead costs are not considered so favorably. "The machinery costs are way out of line as far as farming is concerned," William said. "And the young people could make a lot more off the farm.

"The cost of DHIA has gotten out of hand too. You need to sell a few good animals each year to pay for the records.

"Many young farmers farm by choice. But without family help, no way can a young person borrow enough money to start farming today. With the interest and down payment on a $400,000 farm and the machinery and cow cost, no young person has that much money," William said.

"In the valley out our way, five or six farms are now being turned over to the next generation. They are the survivors. The little farmes have already gone out of the dairy busines, and the larger farmers rent the land."

Dennis served 10 years as a director of Pennsylvania DHIA. This year the state association changed the district lines, and Dennis and Don Duncan would both have been up for election.

"I choose not to run," Dennis said. I had 10 years, and I wanted to give someone else a chance. I think everyone who has a chance to be a director should do it. That way some of the questions about why things cost so much and why they are run the way they are will be answered."

Dennis also thinks Dave Slusser, the new state association general manager, will do a good job to keep DHIA in Pennsylvania, but he has his work cut out for him.

Asked about the reasons for their success, the Dauberts pause and reflect for a moment before answering. Then William speaks first.

"If we are successful, and I'm not sure you would call it success, the reason would be because we are blessed. When my wife and I sit

Penn State Eliminates Sheep Programming

FRANKLIN (Venango Co.) — As a result of the College Futures Committee recommendations, Penn State Cooperative Extension has eliminated adult sheep programming from its educational agenda in all regions of the state except the west, according to Jeffrey T. Fowler, extension agent.

According to Fowler, this means that extension staff will be conducting programs to benefit the sheep industry only in Allegheny, Armstrong, Butler, Beaver, Clarion, Crawford, Erie, Fayette, Forest, Greene, Indiana, Lawrence, Mercer, Venango, Warren, Washington, and Westmoreland counties.

As a result, Penn State has decided to conduct a survey of producers to determine future needs assessment regarding the sheep and wool program efforts.

The survey "will help us, the extension staff, better understand the current problems and concerns of sheep and wool producers like yourself, and therefore help you to better prepare for what lies ahead in the sheep and wool industry," according to a letter addressed to sheep and wool producers by the Venango County extension.

The Western Pennsylvania Sheep Survey, in booklet form, includes 27 questions and one comment section, mailed to producers in sheep-producing counties in the western part of the state. The responses to the survey will be kept confidential. The results will be used, in summary form, for program planning purposes.

These results, in summary form, will be shared with county extension staff, state extension program staff, and state extension administration, according to Fowler.

For more information about the survey, contact Fowler at Venango County Cooperative Extension, P.O. Box 468, Franklin, PA 16323, (814) 437-7607.

DHIA Installs Dairy Comp

ITHACA, N.Y. — Recently, two members of the Ithaca, N.Y.-based Northeast DHIA Dairy Management Technologies team travelled to Bermuda to install Dairy Comp 305 herd management software.

The Bermudian Government, in particular Government Veterinarian Dr. Susan Smith, has decided to begin tracking all 350 of the islands milking cows plus an additional 300 heifers through Dairy Comp 305.

"We are very impressed by what this software can do, and with the people we have spoken with at Northeast DHIA as we were evaluating the various programs," Dr. Smith said.

Currently in Bermuda there are no organized records services such as the Northeast Dairy Herd Improvement Association. Bermudian dairy farmers do not have access to things many DHIA members may take for granted; ME's, Sire information, Component testing, Somatic Cell testing, production information, and the ability to look back at historical trends in the herd.

The goal for these dairies is to be able to accurately evaluate management factors. This will help the dairy community to become more efficient and to increase profits, thereby remaining a viable part of the Bermudian economy.

down and figure that we started with nothing and where we are today, that's the only thing you can say, 'We are blessed.'"

"Sure we are still broke all the time with no extra money to spend. But you look around where the money is, and I guess there is a reason for it."

"We work hard," Dennis adds. "We put in long hours. It's management and a little luck. Sometimes knowing the right people when you want to sell an animal helps."

"I just enjoy working with cows," Ronald concludes. "Being with them, milking them... And of course, we like to talk about them anytime."

Milk Bottle Collectors To Meet

BALLSTON SPA, N.Y. — The national convention of the national Association of Milk Bottle Collectors (NAMBC) will be take place at the Holiday Inn June 2-5. Of special interest will be the auction of milk bottles of all types, signs, creamers, and other historic dairy memorabilia. The auction starts at 9 p.m. on Saturday night. All items will be sold, and a portion of the sales will go to support the national bottle museum. John Robinson, associate auctioneer for Robert Bair Auctioneers of Wrightsville, Pa., will be the guest auctioneer.

Other activities at the convention include all day swapping and buying of dairy antiques in the hotel guest rooms; displays of various collections in the display room; a postal sub-station with special cancellation on Saturday morning and the convention buffet dinner on Saturday evening.

Of special interest this year will be a representative from Stanpac, manufacturers of milk bottles, closures, and pogs, who will bring the members up to date on what is happening in the dairy industry relating to the "return to glass" movement. All activities are open to the public. For information, you may call Thomas F. Gallagher at (203) 227-5244.

Efforts Under Way To Build Animal Disease Fighting Ability

"We have good technology," Card said, "we have that. The problem is the money to develop these technologies so we can get them into the laboratory for instance."

According to Card, a good example of how an existing problem could be cleared up is in the swine industry.

"Enteric disease of swine is probably most common diarrhea condition that we have in swine.

"The bacteria that causes it is not readily cultured from the pig itself and the reaction of different blood and other tissues to different testing procedures is pretty negative. They don't react the way they should," Card explained.

"So in this swine disease, you get those that have the disease overtly. You can see it. It's a clinical disease of diarrhea in young pigs, even in some older pigs, but basically young pigs, so it kills and stunts the growth.

"There's a carrier stage, generally in older pigs, and we can't detect that carrier stage.

"I know for a fact that there are two tests that are available, and we have been offered those tests and we hope to bring them in and develop them, but they are in the laboratory phase and it takes quite a lot of money to develop those tests beyond the lab phase to provide the kind of research that a company wants to have before they dump $10 million, or whatever it's going to be, into the development and sale of a product like that.

"So, we know those two things are available. One is a monochromal antibody and the other is a slide that also takes advantage of an immune phenomena, and they have been developed by two scientists at the University of Arizona.

"We can have that and we will, but developmental research is not really a major function of a diagnostic laboratory, it's really the function of a company that really wants to make sure.

"But the amount of money that can be derived from the sale of this to swine (producers) is so limited, that major companies won't even look at it.

"So we have that kind of problem. We have the technology, but its the development of the material — either the diagnostic material or the matterical for the treatment — that doesn't get done."

From a purely capitalistic point of view, "It's a limited market, so you don't touch it," Card said. But from the assessment of damage to farmers, he said, "Looking a loses, it's a major loss to hog producers."

State Research

According to Card, the tuberculosis and the enteric swine disease are "a couple of real examples of why we think we need to be doing some of the research ourselves. And we are doing some with Johne's with Cornell University. We need to bring some of these other issues in."

According to Card, the work with Cornell on Johne's disease is becoming productive.

"They have some exceptionally talented scientists who are working on the diagnostic techniques for Johne's. We have a good field program down here in Pennsylvania. So we're helping develop their field program, and they're helping us with their diagnostic techniques.

"That's the kind of thing we're doing as we work together on these problems," he said.

Even beyond the PADLS program, Card and others are getting together on a regional basis to address animal health issues.

"We had a meeting the other day in DuBois with people from Ohio, Cornell, University of Pennsylvania, Penn State, state veterinarians from Virginia, Maryland, two laboratory people from New Jersey, and people from the Ohio Department of Agriculture, and we talked about the concept of getting even more strongly coordinated in how we approach this, because in the last 10 years I guess, Pennsylvania spent $1.5 million on Johne's studies of one kind or another. We're gaining, but $1.5 million is a lot of money."

Funding

The operational budget for the laboratories involved in PADLS is around $3 million in round figures for the three laboratories, according to Card. And that doesn't include Sumemrdale, because those funds run from PDA to Summerdale.

He said, "If you threw the Summerdale budget in, your probably looking at $4.5 million."

Card said that the annual cost is "operational funding for people, supplies, materials, travel, that sort of thing.

"We probably have, through PDA, $500,000 per year for research. So we have research money and funds for the diagnostic lab.

"We don't have as much for field studies as we should have. That's one area we're trying to kick up to a decent level so we can get more people involved in these field studies."

The money is needed in order to make the adjustment to equipment and organizations to achieve goals desired. It's less costly than designing new facilities for each disease.

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — An auction to benefit the Chester County 4-H Center will be held on Saturday, May 21 at the Tabas Hotel in Downingtown.

The event will feature "The Buck Run Bridge" lithograph, signed and numbered 12/295 by Chester County Artist Peter Sculthorpe. It will also feature handmade quilts, pillows, and wall hangings done by Chester County quilters.

Other items will include Winross trucks, Ertl trucks, signed sports memorabilia, antiques, and items such as baskets filled with Chester County treasures, handmade bluebird boxes, and bird feeders. The auction will also include several gift certificates from area restaurants, saddleries, museums, nurseries, hot air balloon rides, and white rafting trips. The doors will open at 5:30 p.m. and the auction will begin at 7 p.m. Food will be available.

The Romano 4-H Center is located on Route 322 in West Brandywine Township. Once completed, it will provide a home for 4-H to conduct their various small animal, horse, dairy and livestock shows and sales along with the general 4-H roundup that includes clothing and textiles, vegetables, woodworking, and learn and earn projects, to name a few. Eventually, a building that would house classrooms and meeting rooms will be established that will allow 4-H clubs to conduct meetings and educational seminars at the site. When not in use by the 4-H clubs, it will be available for community use.

The Chester County 4-H Center Inc. board of directors went to settlement on the land in December. Fifteen acres of the property were donated by the Romano Family of West Brandywine Township and an additional five acres was purchased with money raised by the board.

Groundbreaking ceremonies will be scheduled soon. Monies raised by this auction will be put toward the building fund.

Private donations are still being solicited and can be sent to Chester County 4-H Center Inc., c/o Keystone Farm Credit, ACA, P.O. Box 481, Avondale, PA 19311.

Anyone interested in learning more about the 4-H Center should call (610) 268-3110.

BETTER OUR COWS THAN YOURS

Walker McNeill, Manager
Dairy Cattle Research
And Education Center

Have you ever fed your cow 40 pounds of grain a day when she's giving 120 pounds of milk? How about 50 pounds of grain? Why not? Did someone tell you it wouldn't be healthy for the cow? How did they know? And why did you take their word?

Prove it to yourself. Take 10 of your highest producing cows and increase their grain to 50 pounds per day.

If you feed a total mixed ration (TMR), why do you feed 14 to 18 percent crude protein in the mix? Why not 10 or 20? You don't think it'll work?

Prove it to yourself. Feed your highest producing cows a 10 percent crude protein TMR and see if they continue producing 90 or more pounds of milk per day.

Do you need to get your heifers into the milking string quicker? Feed them to gain 3 pounds a day and breed them at 12 months of age. Who said they'd have trouble calving and wouldn't be as productive?

You don't do these things. They aren't current recommendations. Somewhere along the way, someone — perhaps an extension specialist, county agent, consultant, veterinarian, professor, or a columnist in the trade press — has told you that cows have to be fed a certain level of fiber; large amounts of concentrate will cause the cow to go off feed; there isn't enough protein in a 10 percent TMR for a high-producing cow; and overfeeding heifers will cause them to get too fat rather than grow.

But 30 years ago we were told that a cow should not be fed more than 22 pounds of concentrate, regardless of production. And back then we thought that heifers shouldn't be pushed to enter the milking string at less than 36 months of age. How did these changes come about?

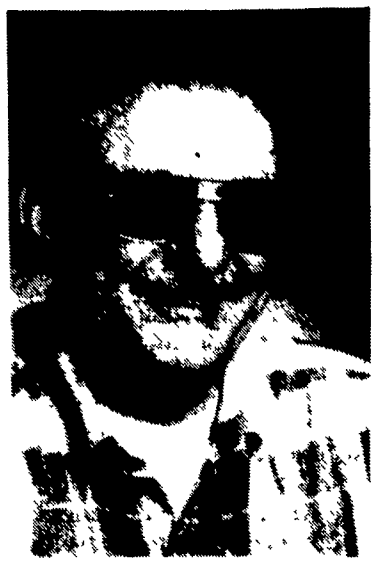
They are the result of dairy scientists continually questioning the "current way" of doing things. What happens in the rumen when more than 22 pounds of concentrate is fed, and what can be done to change it? How can a heifer be fed to reach breeding size at a certain age without putting on fat?

These practices and many others we now accept as standard didn't come about without paying a price. For every one idea that becomes a recommendation, many more do not.

Crude protein (CP) level recommendations in TMR rations are a good example. Depending on production level, it's recommended that TMRs contain 14 to 18 percent CP. This means, however, that sometime some cows were fed either a 12 or 10 percent or 20 or 22 percent CP TMR. Cows on a 12 or 10 percent CP ration didn't milk as well as those on 14 to 18 percent. Production was down, milk sales were lost. Cows fed a 20 to 22 percent ration milked as well as the 14 to 18 percent cows, but didn't increase production enough to pay for the extra protein. Someone lost money paying for the needless extra protein supplement.

Better it happened to our cows than yours.

What ideas and recommendations are currently being challenged by dairy scientists at Penn State? Some but not all of the dozen or so research projects now ongoing at Penn State's Dairy



Walker McNeill

Cattle Research and Education Center include:

- Using surplus dairy products such as whey and outdated baby formula in calf milk replacers. If our calves grow well on these, you may one day feed them to your calves. If they don't, better our calves than yours.
- Evaluating new forage varieties and pasture mixes that may supply higher levels of nutrients to grazing lactating cows than present varieties, and investigating whether protein level and type requirements differ between grazing cows and those fed hay or silage.

If these new varieties work out, your cows may graze new varieties of legumes and grasses in various mixes and be fed a different type of concentrate when grazing. If they don't work out — better our cows than yours.

What ideas and recommendations will be challenged by future dairy scientists at Penn State? No one knows for sure, because the only constant in today's industry is change. The problems you need answers to today won't be the ones for which you need answers tomorrow.

Scientists may investigate genetically designed fungi or bacteria that either ferment feedstuffs or populate the rumen, enabling cows to digest materials that are now simply by-products. They may look at using cow's milk as a source of proteins, medicines, or hormones for humans.

If these futuristic ideas become reality, you may feed straw or sawdust and watch your cows digest it as efficiently as they do the finest alfalfa hay. In the future, you may not be selling your milk to a processor, but to a drug company — at a premium price.

The potential financial rewards of feeding sawdust as digestible as alfalfa or opening up new markets for milk are great. But the risks are great, too.

Would you volunteer to feed your cows treated sawdust to see if they will eat it and give milk on it? Would you be willing to dump milk from 10 or 15 of your cows for a year while FDA approval is obtained? The answer is obvious — better our cows than yours.

This then is why Penn State has a Dairy Cattle Research and Education Center. The most important product that leaves our dairy isn't the milk in the bulk tank. It's the research findings and resulting extension recommendations that become part of your accepted practices.

Findings and recommendations help you to become more efficient, to improve your bottom line. These findings and recommendations ultimately will benefit all Pennsylvanians by helping ensure a milk supply that is wholesome, safe, and readily available at the least possible cost.

Eastern Gamagrass — Corn's Cousin With A Future

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Eastern gamagrass, a perennial cousin to corn that resists drought and withstands wet soggy soils, holds promise of becoming a dual-purpose forage-grain crop for the 21st century, according to U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists.

The grass produces high-protein, nutty flavored grain kernels, about a seventeenth the size of corn. Someday the grain may be produced to feed farm animals or ground into flour for bakery goods savored by nutritious-conscious consumers, said Chester L. Dewald, an agronomist of USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

Unlike corn, eastern gamagrass, which was a common sight to early settlers in the eastern half of the U.S., thrives without annual replantings. Improvements in the warm-season forage grass and its reestablishment may relieve farmers' anxiety in future years like 1993, when many Midwestern fields remained wet through planting season.

Through modern genetics, Dewald and his colleagues at Woodward, Oklahoma expect crosses between eastern gamagrass and corn will be used to speed improvements to both crops.

As for a dual-purpose crop, Dewald said, "We still have a long way to go but it can be done."

Within the past few months, Bryan K. Kindiger, an ARS cytogeneticist at Woodward, has reported discovery of at least a dozen proteins or enzymes that differ between eastern gamagrass and its cousin corn. "These enzymes could serve as markers for mapping genes in a corn-eastern gamagrass cross," Kindiger said.

"Researchers could use these markers to identify plants with the desired combinations of genes, such as for resistance to disease or insects, without having to breed such high numbers of plants."

The scientists are trying to develop new strains of eastern gamagrass with genes that feminize male portions of the flower. Such plants could produce up to 20 times as many seeds as plants without the gene.

"After we develop eastern gamagrass breeding lines with many desired genes, we hope to lock in these genes for succeeding generations through apomixis — asexual reproduction through seed," Kindiger said.

The research team has found that a plant must have two genes on different chromosones to apomictic. Now they are looking for an enzyme or other genetic marker that is associated with the two apomixis genes. Using marker assistance to select parent strains with the apomixis genes would help plant breeders avoid making many crosses to produce just a few apomictic plants, Kindiger said.

New generations of apomictic plants have exactly the same genes as their maternal parent. No new genes from a second parent come into play to alter the offspring's genetic makeup. By crossing two eastern gamagrass strains, each with a different genetic makeup for apomixis, the ARS scientists have produced hybrids called triploids that reproduce only by apomixis.

Kindiger says eastern gamagrass genes for apomixis may someday be put into corn breeding lines to produce asexual hybrid seed. Although hybrid vigor of apomictic plants would persist generation after generation, tempting some farmers to grow their own "perpetual hybrid" seed, commercial seed producers also could use the technology for developing new hybrids.

A report on ARS research on eastern gamagrass appears in the April issue of Agricultural Research magazine, the monthly publication of the Agricultural Research Service.

of life improved comparatively? Do we have more leisure time, do we work fewer hours and less strenuously?

I don't know about you, but I don't, and neither do many of the farmers I know.

Somehow, the farmer is the eternal optimist, forever hanging in there, hoping and praying that tomorrow it will get better, but before that tomorrow comes for most of us, we are like that old Dutchman, "too soon old, too late smart."

God bless the optimists. No one else will!

Coyne Named Division Manager Of Empire Livestock

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Tom Coyne of Avon, N.Y., has been named division manager, for the western region of Empire Livestock Marketing Cooperative, Inc., announced Rick Smith, general manager of Empire Livestock.

As division manager, Coyne will be primarily responsible for the overall operations of Empire Livestock's markets at Bath, Cherry Creek, and Pavilion, N.Y., providing hands-on direction for market managers and helping to establish more uniform policies and pricing in the markets. Previously, Coyne was the market manager of the Pavilion operation.

"During the two years that Tom Coyne has served as market manager in Pavilion, we have seen much improvement in operations and a substantial growth in business," said Smith. "Through this new position, we intend to further utilize Tom's knowledge and experience in the area of dairy cattle replacements and livestock marketing."

The fairly recent addition of the Cherry Creek market, according to Smith, has positioned Empire Livestock for substantial growth in the western part of the state. By having Coyne manage operations in this region, the three markets will become more integrated, expanding their capabilities, and therefore, better serve the needs of the region's farmers.

Coyne brings more than 35 years of experience in the livestock, auction and sale management business to his new position. At Empire Livestock, Coyne was instrumental in developing the highly successful Certified Grower Calf Program and expanding the dairy replacement sale business.

Prior to joining Empire Livestock, he served as head of appraisal services, farm consultant, and supervisor of construction for the Bank of Castile. Since 1966, Coyne has been actively involved in the auction business in more than 20 states.

A graduate of Cornell University where he received a bachelor's degree in agricultural economics, Coyne is a member of the New York State Fair's Advisory Board and is treasurer of the Livingston County Cooperative Extension Service.

Empire Livestock has gross annual sales of $60 million and handles more than 200,000 head of livestock per year. The majority of its consignor-members are farmers marketing cows and calves.

FFA'ers Learn To Manage 'Personalities' At Conference

teamwork, how to get their chapters motivated, ideas for chapter projects, and so forth," said Josh.

The county FFA reporter led a discussion group with guest speaker Daina Savage, reporter for the Intelligencer Journal, and county chapter reporters.

The group involved who to contact at local papers to submit stories for publication, how to write an interesting story, how to take good pictures, and how to submit stories for publication.

Other groups involved county presidents, involving how to provide motivation and leadership for chapter members; a treasurer workshop, which included keeping careful financial records and working within a budget; a secretarial workshop, including record-keeping and communication skills; and other workshops.

"We basically work on their leadership skills so they can take these skills back to their own individual chapters," said Josh.

But the emphasis on this conference was how to deal with personalities.

"As leaders, they're going to have to deal with a lot of different personality types," said Ben Erhart, 1992-1993 state eastern region vice president and "Ropes Course" teamwork coordinator.

Ben, who works at Camp Oswegatchie, a New York state FFA leadership camp, said the purpose of the Ropes Course was to give the FFA'ers the skills to "work with different types of people."

"For me personally," said Josh, "I hope to develop my skills as a leader."

Josh said he has completed public speaking projects as part of his FFA member responsibilties, but "I've never had to lead a workship. So I'm hoping to learn a little bit myself — how do you run a successful workshop, things to keep in mind in case I ever have to do it again, basically how to get some discussion going, how to do a little problem-solving, and also to help me think on my feet."

He is the Republican chairman of the Science, Space and Technology Committee and a member of the Joint Committee on the Organization of Congress (one of only six House Republicans chosen). Congressman Walker's key legislative accomplishments include the Drug-Free Workplace Act, the Growth Management Study, and the Omnibus Space Commercialization Act.

• Dr. Donald Conn. A professor of human relations, Conn is a communication consultant to many leading corporations. His enlightening and provocative theories have attracted much attention from many governmental, scholastic, and business leaders. The author of several texts on business, many executives claim that following his tenets have transformed their personal and business lives.

Producers Must Deal With An Increasingly Anti-Agriculture World

Editor's note: Following is part 2 of the coverage of last week's American Registry of Professional Animal Scientists Mini-Symposium.

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Before the turn of the century, the controversy grew. Should animals be used for food and research?

But it wasn't this century. Actually, it was in the late 1800s that scientists, politicians, clergy, newspaper editors, and much of the general leadership debated the "hot" issue of animal rights/animal welfare.

As the saying goes, the more things change . . . and only now, after other events (including two world wars) took center stage before mid-century have the issues (never resolved satisfactorally before) taken on new meaning.

The controversies occur in 50-year cycles, according to Dr. Lonnie J. King, acting administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS). King was a featured speaker last week at the American Registry of Professional Animal Scientists (ARPAS) Mini-Symposium.

"It is not clear today whether this issue will again start to fade away at the end of this 50-year cycle or will its new intellectual underpinnings sustain it for a longer period of time," said King.

"The issues and arguments, intersting enough, put forward in the 19th century, with one exception, are exactly the same ones that we deal with today, and they still largely remain unresolved," said King.

The one exception — using animals less for research because of the public's conception of alleged animal pain and suffering — has taken hold in a big way. As a result, bowing to the pressure, animal testing for commercial products is decreasing. "It's probably decreased about 50 percent over the last two decades," he said.

Animal research to test new products and new techniques will continue to remain a "hotbed of contention" with increasing pressure on animal science. Unfortunately, producers who raise animals for food may have to face the same pressures.

"It's something for you to look forward to," King warned the agri-industry agencies and representatives present at the meeting.

A large part of APHIS's budget (28 percent, according to King) is spent on surveillance and monitoring for outbreaks of potential animal agriculture and infectious animal diseases.

The role of APHIS is evolving to meet an increasing world population and the changing perceptions and demands of consumers, who reign supreme, said King. But increasingly, food animal agriculture is exceedingly vulnerable to public fluctuations and consequent demands, with a perception that becomes increasingly anti-agriculture.

But APHIS will monitor the pressures and work to counteract controversies before they get out of hand, according to the administrator. APHIS is taking a more "ad hoc" approach, which works on the solutions needed by producers and providers rather than acting, as in the past, like a pigeonholing and boxed-in bureaucracy.

"At APHIS, we're engaged in strategically brokering — problem identification with problem solving," said King. "In the past, we've been brokers through regulation. More and more, we're going to be brokers through facilitation."

More and more, APHIS is helping the public and working with producers to ensure that the adoption of new agriculture science, including biotechnology, is done smoothly.

"Carl Sagan stated, 'We live in a society exquisitely dependent on science and technology, in which hardly anyone knows anything about science and technology,'" said King. The next great ag revolution, biotechnology, is on the horizon, and agriculture must adopt a new strategy as it relates to the public.

"I hear from producers that they're involved in producing food, not producing animals," he said. The strategy at APHIS is to help producers adopt the idas of accountability and responsibility of products after they leave the farm, or point of production, to help rebuild and sustain public confidence from the farm "all the way to the table," said King.

Even though APHIS and other ag agencies are trying to change according to consumer demand, it makes it all difficult because of the "vacillating," or easily changeable needs of consumers, according to Dr. Bradford W. Berry, research food technologist with USDA's Agriculture Research Service (ARS).

Berry spoke about the research undertaken by ARS on the new lean meats and how consumers are reacting to that research.

Berry mentioned one study, undertaken by The Roper Organization through the auspices of the American Meat Institute, in 1992, on low fat. When asked the question, What is low fat?, 59 percent of those polled didn't give an answer. Of the 41 percent who responded, answers varied from 2 percent, to 10, and in some cases, 50 percent. The median and most frequently cited answer was 10 percent.

Also, of a study from Prevention Magazine in 1993, 58 percent of the adults surveyed said that are trying to avoid high-fat foods.

But, according to Berry, what they say they are going to do and what they actually do is completely different.

While people indicate they are going to cut down on fatty food, this "vacillating" behavior finds them eating, at times, "comfort foods," to make up, every once in a while, on what they cut back on.

But the trend continues to be for more and more consumer acceptance of "low fat" products. For instance, in a study comparing the purchase of frankfurters in 1993 versus 1992, sales were double for the "extra light" frank, which claims to have less than 3 percent fat.

Producers Must Deal

All in all, what the ARS research found out, though, is that the taste of a meat product often depends on its fat content. You simply can't take the fat out and still have a good tasting product, according to Berry.

Even so, more work is under way to soon take all the trim fat off meat products — not just to ¼ trim, but 0 trim.

ARS also studied varied methods of cooking meat. What they found is that low fat products cannot stand the cooking abuse that high fat products can sustain, said Berry. However, certain jell and gum systems help the tenderness and taste as replacement for fat in certain kinds of meats.

The researchers are looking into exactly why certain lean meat products do not taste as well as a higher fat counterpart. It could be a factor of pH or cooking procedures, which are still under investigation.

If the 1980s was the decade of reducing chemicals in food and food production, then the 1990s is the decade of dealing with food microbial implications, according to Terry Medley, acting administrator, USDA Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS).

Medley said that FSIS is working under the mandate that the department has a "moral obligation to prevent future outbreaks" of foodborne illness. He mentions that, in a recent outbreak in Nebraska, 16 individuals became ill, of which all recovered. One of them who became ill merely prepared the food, and didn't eat it.

In cooperation with APHIS, FSIS is working on ways to implement a hazards control type program beginning at the farm level, and working throughout the entire food chain from producer to consumer.

Also, Medley explained that the FSIS is investigating several new developments in "rapid testing" technology which will allow inspectors to detect the presence of microbacteria at the time of inspection at meat and poultry plants.

"We want to have as many options as possible to ensure a safe food product," he said.

Also, Medley said that the unannounced plant inspection program, which will target 1,000 meat and poultry plants, so far has conducted inspections of 300 plants.

"Plants need to be alert and in full compliance with food safety regulations," said Medley.

Efforts Under Way To Build Animal Disease Fighting Ability

As an example, Card said that if he has the money, he can bring together the Center for Animal Health and Productivity, New Bolton Center expertise, and Penn State expertise.

"We have the Center for Animal Health and Productivity, which is a population medicine group, really three or four major players.

"We can go to Penn State and they have extension specialists, a couple young scientists who are epidemiologists (study of disease in a population). So we have outreach educational capabilities which they don't have at New Bolton Center.

"So what we want to do is amalgamate this group," Card said. "Kind of screw them together, with funding. The thing you screw things together with to make them work is money."

"And in that way, we'll have a cadre, as the legislation suggested. We'll have a cadre of really good people that can do a number of things out there.

"They can investigate, they can go back and do epidemiological studies, in the laboratory, population medicine studies, crunch a lot of numbers, or they can go out there and take something like this Johne's and use it as an educational tool and tell people, if your gonna have a herd that has infection, you should doing these things; one, two, three ..."

Another area of bringing the entire program together, is to try to develop focus for the research.

One of the things Card did after taking over the job of developing PADLS two years ago, was to create committees to take responsibility for getting things coordinated.

The six-member laboratory committee has two people from each lab. Card said, "They kind of run the laboratories.

"I have a research committee, and we are working on our approach on how we should try to get more money for research and how we should coordinate our research.

"If you got five mastitis projects between the two universities, you'd like to have those mastitis projects coordinated in some manner, so you'd have maybe three major objectives up here that your working toward.

"We're trying to coordinated research efforts so that we try to satisfy a few major goals and get something done, instead of everybody having a little pea-shooter (at a majory problem)," he said.

Field Investigation

"On the field side, we need to be able to go out and do these same things, but to come back with the disease surviellance lets say, would tell us what some of major problems are.

"We don't know what the major problems are. We assume Johne's because we see a lot of it, but maybe it's not. Maybe economically it's not that big of a deal," Card said. "We don't know that, but that's what the Center for Animal Health and Productivity might tell us."

Another committee which was appointed by the Animal Health Commission is a Field Investigation Advisory Committee.

For the first time, members of different agencies all concerned with aspects of health and/or animal productivity are sitting on the same committee.

"On the field investigation advisory committee ... we have (a representative from) public health, a person from Game Commission, and a person from DER, so we covered the major agencies.

"So, if we do have a toxic waste problem — let's say bad water, whatever it might be, to get into the area of toxicology, we can discuss how we go about this, and we should be able to identify or have identified already some diagnostiticians within our system who can respond to a problem that has water, mycobacteria lets's say, toxic materials ... "We can do that, we just haven't quite identified all those teams yet, but that's what we're trying to do, so that when you come to a rabies (incident), you know that there's a certain responsibility for a PAI lets say.

"We provide any kind of help in the accumulation or accession of animals that may have contributed to a human exposure and try to take them in," Card said. "If they're dead, we take tissues, if they're not dead, we may euthanize them and take th appropriate tissues and they go to public health, to the Lionville Lab, where most of the rabies cases are handled.

"We (Summerdale lab) do some rabies culturing ourselves, we do that mainly because it may be more appropriate to do it quickly here, than to send it to Lionville.

"So, we work with those people and we're trying to get a more cooperative activity going on between our diagnostic system and our laboratory."

One of the main elements in developing a cooperative relationship is communications. A courier system is being used now, supported by the PDA, to help with speed and efficiencies in addressing health matters.

"We provide a courier system, its available throughout the state on a commercial basis. Within the three laboratories, (PADLS pays) for the transportation of tissues and that sort of thing," Card said.

"So, if a person can get something into a laboratory, and they need to get it to Tony Castro, at Penn State, the virologist in the system, they simply put it on a courier at New Bolton Center and it gets to Penn State that day," Card explained.

He said he uses a private contractor for the service.

Other things are happening.

"We have a speciality area in veterinary toxicology developing in New Bolton Center," Card said.

"We've hired a toxicologist, he's a very good young man. Hopefully, he's going to provide an awful lot of help to our program because of his background and knowledge. He comes from Michigan State. His name is Dr. Bob Poppenga. And we're developing, renovating facilities right now and we're buying up equipment and so forth as fast as we can pull it together, because he's a vastly important person in our system."

As an example of why such a specialist is needed, Card explained about a real incident.

"We had a call, from Meadville. In this case, the county extension specialist and the vet were concerned about a toxic problem, and so we bring samples as quickly as we can to Penn State and courier them to Bob Poppenga.

"In that way, we have a speciality area at New Bolton Center in toxicology, we have a specialty area in virology at Penn State."

Card said the program actually includes two specialty areas in food safety — "an E. Coli reference center at Penn State that's internationally recognized, it's been there for a long time and it's used by a large number of agencies around the country to identify diffemt strains of E. Coli.(Dr. Dick Wilson runs it) and at the same time at New Bolton Center, we have a similar facility Chuck Benson runs. That's a salmonella reference lab. We can do some very sophisticated identification of salmonella species.

"And in fact, New Bolton Center, Summerdale and Penn State are working on the salmonella prorblem. It started last year as a pilot program.

"And we doing the majority of the culturing of the environmental samples and egg samples in the three diagnostic labs. They've supported us.

"The federal government, the USDA, has supported us to some extent, but they're going to back off slowly, and we're going to have to pick up this support from in the state from the laboratory system and the industry itself.

"So, it's a joint program," he said.

The cooperative construction of an integrated system is getting into many aspects, according to Card.

"When we have the Johne's meeting, we're really trying to talk about some coordination between states and regions as we do with Cornell now, we don't have too many.

"Virginia and Maryland have syustems that we can coordinate with, and New Jersey can do some things that we can take advantage of.

"So, if New Jersey has a good test system for Potomac Horse Fever, which they do, then we might as well send our samples to New Jersey and have them do it, because they have the expertise, the cost is right and so forth.

"We send stuff all over the country to people that we realize have a greater capability to or a more effective testing procedure lets say, and pay for it, then to try to set up a new systems. We do, however, need the basic expertise and guidelines. And that's what we're developing, I think.

"I think by the end of another two years, we will be in fairly good shape."

Highbourne Farm Produces Breeding Stock, Venison

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

DALLASTOWN (York Co.) — Check the feed troughs at Highbourne Farm and you will find rations comparable to those found on most livestock operations throughout the region. Orchardgrass hay, haylage, corn silage and a grain blend of corn, oats or barley, soybean meal with added vitamins and trace minerals, plus abundant pasture make up the herd's diet.

But rations aside, the Dallastown R3 farm is no ordinary livestock facility. Highbourne Farm runs the largest commercial red deer herd in the Eastern United States, maintaining between 125 to 200 head, depending on the season of the year and customer demands for breeding stock and venison.

John and Nancy Behrmann, who own and operate Highbourne Farm, originally planned to raise horses on the wooded, hilltop land on a high ridge near the York city water supply's Lake Redman.

The tamest deer readily accept John Behrmann's handouts of grain. Deer have been raised domestically for more than 4,000 years.

"A friend who was a curator at the Bronx Zoo suggested red deer, rather than fallow deer which we also considered," says John Behrmann. "They're more disease resistant, carry more body weight and have a better feed conversion rate."

Behrmann imported his initial 50 head of breeding stock from New Zealand in 1990. Due to quarantine laws, the deer could not directly enter the U.S. from New Zealand, but first had to go through Canada, a process that in total took 210 days. A second herd was imported from Canada two years later, with bloodlines from Scottish red deer.

"That was to get another gene pool and add hybrid vigor to our herd," Behrmann explains. "The stags from that bloodline are larger but have a quieter temperament.

Since red deer, especially the stags or males, become more confident with size and maturity, temperament is Behrmann's first criteria for breeding selection. Size and conformation follow close behind as desirable selective traits.

"You never turn your back on them," says Behrmann, of the gentle-eyed, docile-looking deer. And, since many buyers of red deer are first-time livestock raisers or former producers of domestic cattle, a calmer temperament enhances ease of handling of this traditionally wild species.

A mature red deer stag may weigh as much as 600 pounds, while females, or hinds, average about 280 pounds when full-grown. Stags reach breeding maturity from 24 to 30 months of age and should remain viable herd sires through at least eight years old. Females can be productive breeders for about 15 years, Behrmann estimates.

Red deer are related to the North American elk, which they resemble in conformation and impressive stag antler growth. Their offspring are called calves, and are born after a gestation period of 233 days. Mating season at Highbourne Farms runs from early September through mid-December. On average, one stag is run with a herd of 40 hinds, with a second stag rotated in about halfway through the breeding season to catch any remaining open females.

Early-fall bred calves, for May or June calving, are most desirable, since they will grow to about 120 pounds by September weaning and can better withstand harsh winter weather and competition at the feed troughs.

"We follow a lot of the same management practices as those for cattle," Behrmann says. "We test for brucellosis and tuberculosis vaccinate for 13 different potential health problems and worm four times a year."

Hardy animals, the deer rarely use the shelters located in the pastures, even through the coldest weather, such as that of this past winter. They will seek out shade during summer heat, preferring the tree-lined pasture edges or wooded pasture areas.

"They are a lot of fun to raise and to watch grow," grins John Behrmann, who obviously enjoys this unusual livestock enterprise. "Successful deer farmers generally to something else as well. Deer don't take all that much time, maybe two hours a day, except at times when we tag, test or vaccinate."

Though semi-domesticated, the deer are still skittish and do not herd well for handling, so special procedures are followed for health work. High gates are set up from pasture exit to the barn and covered with shade cloth for a wall effect. Then the deer are slowly moved to a work area in the barn, where they are run through a hydraulically-operated squeeze and weigh chute. The high, enclosed, thickly-cushioned sides keep the deer calm and protected during weighing, testing and vaccinations.

At weaning, calves are weighed, tagged and penned, then calmed with round-the-clock music to distract them from a constant calling between mothers and babies. With hand-feeding and extra attention, they quickly tame, and are then grouped by weight and size.

Though quick to scatter if frightened, the red deer are normally docile, even-tempered and curious.

Antler growth, which begins in early spring, will be removed from the stags to prevent them from causing injuries to other herd members.

"Dogs are their worst enemies: the deer could clear our seven-foot fences if they were pressed," says Behrmann. More of a problem is that some of the deer become very friendly and will quickly slip through a gate in search of feed handouts, given the opportunity." Double gates at the pasture compound entrance are added "escape" insurance.

"You can't chase them, but they will come right back if they do get out," says this red deer specialist, relating the tale of a North Dakota deer-raising friend whose herd of hinds escaped when a gate was left open. "They all came back in the fall, bringing their calves with them."

White-tailed deer are abundant in this part of southern York County and have an occasion come bounding in through the 35 acres of fenced deer pasture. Usually, notes Behrmann, that happens when farm equipment working nearby stirs them from the fields. Visits from their wild deer neighbors are more likely to occur during intensely-bitter winter weather, when natural feed for the whitetails becomes scarce or inaccessible.

Deer hunting season was a real concern for at least the first few years. The herd is kept relatively confined during that period and shade cloth draped over the enclosure fences. Neighbors of Highbourne Farms have also become extra watchful during deer season for unfamiliar vehicles and hunters.

Corn silage is fed through the winter, November through April, along with an average of four pounds of orchardgrass hay and two pounds of grain. Pasture is the prime warm weather feed, a blend of bluegrass and common white clover which withstands close cropping and constant trodding by the herds' sharp, pointed hooves.

Browse from trees and shrubs is a natural favorite of the deer. In the several areas of wooded pasture, Behrman has encircled in wire the trunks of trees he wants standing for shade. The deer eat the bark from the unprotected trees, which are cut for firewood after they die. In the openings cleared in this way during the past four years, grass patches will be seeded to enhance eating and feeding areas in the wooded paddocks.

Stags are dehorned each year when their antlers have reached about half-growth, to help control fighting and injury to other herd members. Behrmann relates that the first year they had the deer, they wanted to see how large the antlers would get, and lost a female that was fatally injured from an antler goring.

Behrmann is a director of the North American Deer Farmers Association, an industry group of about 400 members raising various types of elk and deer. Fallow deer are the most numerous, with members growing about a half-milion head. Red deer rank second in popularity, numbering about 25,000 head. In western states such as Texas, deer farmers operate primarily as ranchers with fenced, open-grazing areas, while producers in other parts of the country have facilities more traditional to cattle raising. New York has numerous deer farmers, many of them dairymen who sold their herds in the whole-herd buyout program.

Prices for a "covered" or bred female are in the $2,500 range, while breeding-size stags may sell for more or less, dependent on their bloodlines and conformation. A male weaned calf is worth about $500.

"We are fighting as an industry to be treated just like livestock," Behrmann says of regulatory concerns of the organization. "We want some regulations, we want to be classified as livestock, we want brucellosis testing when animals are moved from state to state."

Concerns over deer spreading diseases like brucellosis and tuberculosis to cattle has haunted the industry and caused some friction at time between deer and cattle producers. Elk and whitetail raisers are subject to oversight by the Pennsylvania Game Commission, since those species are indigenous to the state, while producers of non-native deer come under Department of Agriculture regulatory rules.

"We've tested for tuberculosis for a long time. Everything that goes out of here is tested in accordance with either the rules of the receiving state or within the state for our Pennsylvania buyers. Some states require two sets of tests, given 90 days apart. The producers with the most financial stakes are going to follow the rules because they have the most to lose if they don't."

Because of his deer raising experience, Behrmann finds himself in a consulting position to others interested in the business. He has helped start up operations in Tennessee and Maine and has inquiries from New Yorki, New Jersey and Delaware.

Due to the excess of stage resulting from the breeding stock business, Behrmann has also become a marketer of another commodity — venison. The initial aim was to retail quarters, halves and whole carcasses, but venison sales have instead gone in the direction of the restaurant trade, while retaining a small retail clientele. Cutting and packaging is done by the J.L. Miller Sons meat retail market in York. Meat is sold either fresh, or freshly frozen, sealed in cryovac packaging, and demand is now outpacing Highbourne Farm's ability to supply.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Let's celebrate!

Everytime you turn around, we're celebrating, saluting and otherwise paying tribute to some momentous happening or memorable development.

It might be National Spider Plant Day or Worldwide Pencil Invention Week or Take Your Cat To Lunch Month or The International Year of the Tyrannosaurus Rex.

All this celebration, of course, is enhanced and reinforced by those friendly merchandising folks who encourage you to send a card, send a gift, or send something — so long as you generate a turnover of marketing dollars.

Not to be outdone by such upbeat, outgoing trends of society, we here on the farm have begun saluting remarkable remembrances with our own declarations. For instance, in remembrance of this past January, we have set it aside as East Coast Collapsing Buildings Month. Followed by February, noted for its Annual Thaw Out Cattle Fountains Week.

March brought a rousing turnout for Can't We Soon Haul All This Manure? Day. And in April we rejoiced to Rebuilding The Collapsed Buildings Month.

May has now been set aside as Save-A-Chicken Month.

This dubious salute has come about to honor our own homebred line of half-bantam, half-full-sized chickens, the results of several years of natural crossing in which nay and all genes responsible for even a lick of common sense have been bred out. Resulting trait characteristics include beautiful feathering, uncommonly loud, squawking vocal chords, speed and agility which defy catching and no muscling whatsoever worth putting on a barbeque grill.

A worthless strain of domestic bird, if ever there was one. Nevertheless, we tolerate them because they're too much trouble to bother with, generally stay out of the way and do serve as interesting and novel conversation starters, which usually begin with the phrase, "Those stupid chickens....."

That's what I found myself muttering recently while leaning out over a pool of manure slurry, trying not to fall face-first into the dark, soupy mess in which a gorgeous-colored rooster floundered.

Moments before, I'd rounded a corner where several of the noisy birds were raising a senseless racket (later I saw the dog curled up nearby). To quell the loud fuss, I waved my hands to chase the squawkers away — and one rooster flew to land on what looked solid, but wasn't underneath. The pool of manure was too deep to step in with the sneakers I wore and the chicken too far way to lean and pick up. With a piece of board, I finally manuvered the bird around to where I could grab a handful of tail feathers.

Twenty-four hours later — almost to the minute — the same rooster turned up tangled in a piece of plastic-mesh in which we wrap our large, round bales. Where he picked up the large section of mesh wrap remains a mystery, but he had it firmly entangled around his feet and sharp spurs. Again, amidst his screeching protests, I was able to set him free. This bird may have more lives than most cats.

So, in honor of our rooster, join me in celebrating Save-A-Chicken Month.

Save it for Sunday dinner.

Extra crispy, please.

ets have evolved, the white-tablecloth restaurants which demand the very choicest in cuts and tavern establishments which favor less costly cuts, like ribs. Customers are primarily in Dauphin, York and Lancaster counties, with plans for expansion into other surrounding counties. Summertime shipments go via a messenger service that delivers in a few hours, while parcel service works well during cold months.

"We try to educate the chefs," Behrman says of the delicate cooking needs of venison. "It should never be served well done since venison has no fat and gets tougher with overcooking. A lot of chefs, though, have German or Swiss backgrounds or experience and are familiar with venison because of its popularity in Europe."

Venison is often criticized for having a gamey taste, an undesirable flavor that Behrmann says often comes from the adrenalin pumped into the system of a scared, running wild deer. Failure to immediately remove the scent glands and the hide also contribute to an off-flavor, as does letting the carcass hang unrefrigerated for several days.

Stags go for the venison market from 14 to 28 months of age, are aged at 50-degree for five to seven days and then cut and immediately packaged.

"Venison should always be thawed in the refrigerator and never on the countertop or in the microwave," emphasizes this marketer. "The meat will get tough." For that reason, he prefers to market fresh cuts over frozen.

Nutrition-wise, venison is similar to boneless breast of chicken, and comparably low in fat and cholesterol. It compares in cost to quality veal or fish, but has no shrinkage, according to Behrmann.

"We like venison and eat a lot of it," he smiles, adding that he and Nancy have collected numerous recipes that make their favorite commodity, even less tender cuts like shoulder, delicious and fork-soft.

TAKING TIME

Taking Time Helps Stop Violence

Why is our gut reaction to punch someone or to shout a hurtful name when someone insults us? Statistics show that the United States is becoming increasingly violent. But violence is not just a societal issue. Violence affects small communities, families and individuals. Across the country people are also demonstrating that it's small communities, families, and individuals who have the opportunity to stop violence — one confrontation at a time.

Did you know that half of the homicides that occur in the United States are among family and friends? Dr. Deborah Prothrow-Stith, MD outlines the characteristics of people committing violent crimes — the victim and assailant are at least acquainted; they are usually of the same race and are predominantly male; the violence started with an argument; usually the violence is not related to a felony (example: burglary); alcohol is usually involved; and usually a firearm is present.

Prothrow-Stith believes that children learn from an early age that violence is funny and cool. The heroes of our media usually resort to violence to solve problems. She also observes that most parents don't want "wimps" for children. But I also think that parents don't want their children or grandchildren to be severely wounded or die because of an argument or an insult.

Is there a choice? Yes.

Take the first step. Always gather information about the situation instead of running to solve the problem with only a tidbit of "news." Get the full story — both sides of the issue. Examine both the message and the messenger. This is a great technique to teach children. By taking the time to really investigate, we can often diffuse or bring new understanding to a situation.

An additional step is much harder. Each of us must make a commitment to seek non-violent solutions. Unfortunately, sometimes seeking a non-aggressive action results in us being called names or in our losing friends. This commitment will carry some costs, but it will also bring rewards.

A third step is to actually confront the offending party. This must be done with humor and grace. Present a list of the injustices that occurred and a plan to resolve them. Any confrontation, if it is to work long-term, must not humiliate the other person. It should allow the other person to do good, to repair a wrong. These three principles are part of a set of six steps that Martin Luther King, Jr. set forth for solving community or personal problems in non-violent ways.

When I heard these ideas, I saw immediate application for families. If parents would seek the whole story before disciplining, if wives would gather details before accusing husbands, if teens would negotiate instead of just dumping friends, if neighbors would present plans for restitution instead of planning sabotage, we all would have fewer stresses, fewer hurts. But this process is a grueling one. It takes lots of energy (and longevity) to see a difference. One of the tips that helps is to surround yourself with other people who seek to solve problems without violence. That way you have support to choose another way when your first reaction is to lash out at the person who hurt you.

By taking time to teach children (and ourselves) how to get the big picture before we respond from our gut, each of us can help to reduce the anger and violence around us. Together, we can build communities that care.

'Berry' Excellent Recipes

In the early 18th century, French explorers discovered a plump red berry cultivated by the Indians of Chile in South America. They took several plants home with them.

In 1714, the Chilean berry was crossed with a wild meadow strawberry that had been discovered in colonial Virginia. The result was a luscious strawberry that is similar to what we now eat.

Select fully ripe and appropriately colored strawberries with intact caps. White or pale pink berries do not become sweeter after they are picked and should not be purchased.

Here are some storage tips:

• Always remove bruised, rotted or molded berries before storing.

• Strawberries should be refrigerated immediately after purchasing.

• Never rinse the berries or remove the caps before storing. Removing the cap early can reduce flavor, texture, and nutrient quality.

• Strawberries can only be stored a couple of days in refrigerator. If held longer, a gray mold may develop.

• For optimal refrigeration, place berries no more than two berries deep in a shallow container or tray covered with waxed paper or plastic wrap.

Farm-raised venison has a unique and delicate flavor. It is a finely grained, mild and tender meat that is better from a health standpoint than other meats and poultry. Although it is a red meat, it has about the same calories, fat, cholesterol and protein as salmon and it falls well below the American Heart Association's guidelines for fat, cholesterol and calories.

Farm-raised venison does not need to be tenderized, but may be marinated if desired. Venison is a lean meat without noticeable marbling, but all fat should be trimmed off, as it is the fat that can have a strong taste. As with all very lean meats, venison should be cooked at a fairly high heat for a short period, preferably rare, and never well done. Venison tallow, similar to lamb, congeals quickly so the time between cooking and presentation must be short. Do not "rest" venison roasts before serving as with beef. This meat should be served piping hot and kept that way by pre-heating the platter and plates.

Here is a recipe from Highbourne Farm, which is featured this week on the Homestead Notes page.

BROILED VENISON CHOPS

- 6 venison rib or loin chops
- ¼ cup all purpose flour
- 2 tablespoons bacon fat
- 1 cup venison stock
- 3 medium onions
- 1 cup milk
- 1½ pounds fresh mushrooms, sliced
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon ground pepper

In a large iron skillet over moderately high heat, lightly brown chops on both sides in bacon fat. Transfer chops to a shallow pan; retain drippings in skillet. Broil chops at high heat five inches below heating element. Turn once and broil until medium rare. In the drippings in the skillet, gently cook the onions and mushrooms until lightly browned. Blend the all purpose flour, stock, milk, salt and pepper. Add to pan. Cook, stirring constantly until thickened and bubbly — about four minutes. Pour onion and mushroom sauce over chops while both are hot. Serve on a hot platter. This serves six.

New Product Extends Life Of Produce

HOUSTON, Texas — Consumers will now be able to store their fresh fruits, vegetables, herbs and flowers for weeks, or even months before they spoil thanks to Evert-Fresh bags, a new chemical-free packaging product available in grocery and health food stores. The bags, which are made of processed oya stone, absorb and remove ethylene gas which causes aging and ultimate deterioration in produce and flowers.

Unlike ordinary plastic bags, Evert-Fresh bags "breathe" so that damaging gases produced by fresh produce are removed. An anti-fogging treatment minimizes moisture, inhibits bacteria growth and reduces vitamin C loss up to 50 percent.

"This product appeals to the health conscious," said Tom Stewart, president of Evert-Fresh Corporation, a Houston-based company. "Our reusable bags allow consumers to purchase larger quantities of produce, and store the product. Consumers like the lower bulk prices and the convenience of making fewer trips to the grocery store."

The bags also encourage healthier eating, according to Stewart. "Most working people eat a lot of fast food lunches because of convenience," Stewart said. "That is not only unhealthy, but expensive. With Evert-Fresh bags, workers can bring healthy produce to work, and have salads for lunch. If unexpected business lunches come up every day for a week, the produce will still be good the next week or the week after."

The product also appeals to farmers because it extends the length of time they have to get produce to market, according to Stewart. "Our packaging, which is reusable, allows farmers to store produce longer preventing glut supply situations," Stewart said. "In addition, our bags and film allow farmers and shippers to plan more efficient travel itineraries for their deliveries."

Dole Tropifresh conducted shelf life tests using Evert-Fresh film on its fresh green asparagus. Results showed that asparagus wrapped in Evert-Fresh film deteriorated significantly less than that wrapped using their existing commercial packaging. Stemilt Research and Development lab conducted similar test using pears. Analysis indicated that Evert-Fresh film slowed the maturing process with relation to pear firmness, sugar content and color.

The bags are sold in packages of 10 and are available in small, medium and large sizes. Prices for the bags start at around $2.49 per package. They can be found in the produce sections of most grocery and health food stores. Bulk Evert-Fresh film is available in double-tube rolls, ranging in width from 6- to 40-inches. However, Evert-Fresh film can be custom manufactured to meet any size requirements. For more information about the bags or film contact Evert-Fresh at (713) 529-4593.

Evert-Fresh bags are sold in the produce department of most grocery and health food stores. The chemical-free bags are lined with processed oya stone, a mineral that absorbs ethylene gas which causes deterioration in fruits, vegetables, herbs and flowers. In addition, bulk Evert-Fresh film is available in double-tube rolls, ranging in width from 6- to 40-inches.

Consuming Thoughts

Fay Strickler

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.

STOP, LOOK and READ the new food labels! May 1994 was the deadline for food companies to comply with the new regulations by the Foods and Drug Administration (FDA) and the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), requiring the new food label on all processed foods. New labels on processed meat and poultry items, which are under USDA jurisdiction, must appear on products by July 1994.

When picking up a product with the new label, consumers will notice the new and comprehensive nutritional information under a section now called "Nutrition Facts." This will enable consumers to learn about the nutritional qualities of the products they buy and use the information when making daily food choices.

The new label is distinguished by the redesigned nutrition panel. The FDA and USDA considered the health issues of greatest concern to the general public, and identified nutrients that must appear on the label and those that are optional.

Nutrients that are now required include total calories, calories from fat, .total fat, saturated fat, cholesterol, sodium, total carbohydrates, dietary fiber, sugars (mono- and disaccharides), protein, vitamins A and C, calcium and iron. If a manufacturer makes a claim about any voluntary nutrient, such as if a product is enriched or fortified with thiamin or niacin, then information about that nutrient is mandatory.

You'll also be able to find information on fat, fiber and other food components fundamental to lowering your risk of chronic diseases. Listings for nutrients like thiamin and riboflavin will no longer be required, because Americans generally eat enough of them these days.

According to the former Health and Human Services (HHS) Secretary Louis Sullivan, M.S., the new label will provide a consistent tool to help consumers select healthier diets and will give consumers the power to take an active, responsible role in protecting and promoting their health.

You can expect to see a full listing of "Nutrition Facts" on most packaged foods. Small packages may use a simplified format.

Labeling will remain voluntary for fresh produce, as well as single ingredient raw meat products (such as raw chicken breasts or beef roasts). Many grocery stores already display point-of-purchase nutrition facts for these items and more will be encouraged to participate. If the voluntary program for raw foods doesn't catch on, labeling for these products will become mandatory.

Now you can compare similar products and know that their serving sizes are basically identical. So when you realize how much fat is packed into that carton of triple chocolate-almond ice cream you're eyeing, you might opt for low-fat frozen yogurt instead. Serving sizes will also be standardized, so manufacturers can't make nutrition claims for unrealistically small portions. That means a chocolate cake, for example, must be divided into 8 servings sized to satisfy the average person — not 16 servings sized to satisfy the average first grader.

So consumers, the next time you go to the supermarket — STOP, LOOK and READ the "Nutrition Facts" and see how the new labels will help you to choose healthier foods, take the guess work out of grocery shopping and help you make more informed decisions in the supermarket.

Where Food Comes From

Third grade students at Public School 214 in Queens (New York City) are learning about where their food comes from through Agriculture in the Classroom — a program that incorporates agriculture into the school curriculum in grades K-6. On a recent visit to New York City, American Farm Bureau President Dean Kleckner and New York Farm Bureau President Charles Wille saw firsthand the teaching about agriculture in a big city school. They were joined by several school officials, including the city's top educator, Chancellor of Education Ramon Cortines. The Farm Bureau leaders listened as Rhoda Gilbert, a third grade teacher at PS 214 presented a lesson on agriculture. They also visited the school garden and viewed agricultural projects of the class. In the photo, AFBF President Dean Kleckner answers questions about agriculture from PS 214 students.

Children Receive Hands-On Learning At Moyer Farm

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

FRYSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — One hundred and forty third-graders showed up at Jessica Moyer's farm recently. Nine-year-old Jessica, who is also a third grader, generously shared her cat Pumpkin with the visitors.

But the children did not come to the Lebanon County farm merely to play. They came to learn about soil, plants, animals, water, natural resources, and even possible career opportunities.

Students planted a garden after a short lesson about plants needing sun, water, food, clean air, and soil in which to grow.

"Call this soil. It is not dirt. Dirt is what your mother sweeps off the kitchen floor. Soil is what we grow plants in," said John Falter, Berks County extension agent, who taught a class on plants.

He talked about the different ways that plants can be grown in the garden such as planting seeds, bulbs, and starter plants.

Falter then gave each child a piece of sprouted potatoes. "These are not rotten," he said when some children complained of the wrinkling potato skin and the long, straggly sprouts on them.

Falter showed the children how to stretch a string from end to end in the garden as a guide to dig a straight row. Each child planted at least two potatoes in one of the groups. Some of the other groups planted peas, beans, or onions.

The students planted tiny petunia seeds in a flower pot. They took the containers back to the classroom where they will watch the plants germinate (sprout through the soil) — hopefully.

"The problem is that too many people plant the seeds too deeply. They complain that it was bad seed, but actually it wasn't," Falter said. Only a sprinkling of dirt should be scattered on the seeds for cover.

"Run your fingers through the soil and see what you can find," Jed Vail told a group of children when boxes of soil were placed in front of them.

"Ugh, I found a worm!" someone yelled.

"Ugh, ugh — here is a piece of a worm," another one said.

Worms, roots, and organisms help keep soil healthy so plants can grow. That's why farmers plow the cornstalks into the soil, it is a method of fertilizing or feeding the soil.

The soil is made up of three parts — sand, silt, and clay.

Jed showed the children how water runs through these. When he poured water on a jarful of sand, the water ran straight through it and the sand collapsed. That's because sand holds very little moisture. The water moved slower when poured on the silt, and with the water stayed setting in the clay because clay holds all the water.

"We need the right amount of each of these — sand, silt, and clay — in the soil to hold the right amount of moisture so the plants do not dry out," Jed said.

Amy Phillips taught the children how to do a sediment test. Each student received a small jar, which they partially filled with soil. After warm water was poured in the jar, the students screwed on the cap and shook the jar. The jars were left set for awhile. When the students checked the jars later, the clay had settled on the bottom with parts of plants floating on the top.

A demonstration on soil erosion showed how soil that is sloped washes to the bottom when it rains. That's why plants, trees, flowers, should be grown in the soil to keep it from washing away. Farmers also plow hilly land horizontally to keep it from washing away.

The children were divided into groups that rotated between seven different 40 minute workshops.

To one group gathered in front of the barn for the Caretaker of Animal workshop, Ralph Moyer asked, "Why is every one holding their noses?"

The odor from the 240-head dairy herd was a bit unusual for many of the children, but Moyer assured them that if they came to the farm everyday, they wouldn't even think about the smell anymore.

"Cows probably eat better than you or I," Moyer told the students. "We often eat what we like, not what is good for us."

Cows, he said, are fed nutritious feed that has been carefully analyzed at a lab to make sure that it contains adequate amounts of minerals, vitamins, and all the things cows need to remain healthy.

People like to eat each of their foods separately, but cows need it grinded and mixed together; otherwise, cows would have a tendency

(Turn to Page B11)

One hundred forty students from Tulpehocken Area School District helped plant a garden at Ralph and Crystal Moyers' farm in Bernville.

Students from the plant physiology class show how erosion washes away top soil.

Soil is made up of sand, silt, and clay. This experiment shows how the combination of all three composites are needed for the soil to hold the right amount of moisture for plants to grow.

"Cows eat better than you or I," Ralph Moyer tells the students who visit his Myerstown farm.

perhaps to eat the grain but not the hay.

Human beings like variety in their dinners, but cows need to eat the same diet every day because their stomachs become easily upset. When fresh grain is used, the transfer is done gradually to help prevent the cows stomachs from reacting.

Moyer showed the children the large aspirins that cows are sometimes fed when not filling well.

The large aspirin is much too large for children to swallow. Cows don't like to swallow it either, so a special gadget is used to stick it down the cows throat.

A veterinarian, Staci Hytrek, talked about the care of small animals and the need to have them properly vacinnated and fed the right foods for healthy living.

In addition to the workshops discussed in this article, the following were taught: Caretaker of Water by Buzz Frances of the Berks County Conservation District; Caretaker of Resources by David Varone, Berks County Recycling coordinator; Caretaker of the Community by Tammy Balthaser, Beef Council Industry representative.

The all-day event was sponsored by the Tulpehocken High School agricultural department. Christine Williams, ag advisor, said that the children to learn how agriculture applies to so many different areas of life. She also wanted professionals to teach some of the classes so that students could learn about career opportunities and how everything works together.

'Be A Good Role Model' Is Time-Proven Formula For Leadership

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

McCLURE (Mifflin Co.) — Her message may not be loud, but it is clear and important — and she doesn't get paid to preach it from a podium around the country. She's lived it. After 28 years of working with children and youth as 4-H community leader, Vivian Mowery near McClure, Mifflin County, is retiring. Her experience of almost three decades can be rolled up into one crucial message for anyone working with children and youth — be a good role model.

"The things we say and do have a lasting, lifetime effect on the lives of young people. The life you set as a role model for a young person is extremely important," Mowery confirms.

It would take hours to sort through the 4-H records Mowery has kept to see how many lives she has touched during those years. She was first approached by former 4-H community leader Helen Wright about being a flower garden project leader. As membership increased, Mowery took on other clubs — sewing, quilting, and Children Can Be Fun. A short time later, Wright stepped down and Mowery was asked to be community leader of a group of less than 20 kids.

Through the years, Mowery saw membership increase to a high of 110 community club members. To be a good role model and leader, Mowery put the safety of the children first, lived what she believes are essential values for leaders (or for anyone), and looked for the potential in each child. That's Mowery's time-proven formula for good leadership.

As for values, Mowery believes you start with good sound Christian doctrine to direct you to lead other people.

Then you add good character and integrity. "You can lead others with, for example, working skills. If children see their mom and dad working, theyre going to work. It's the same with 4-H kids (what they see in their leaders). If a person respects you, they'll do for you."

For Mowery, honesty ranks high on the leader-quality list too. "We always taught our children that whatever you do, you live with the decision you make," says Mowery, speaking of her and her husband Ken's three children, Ken Jr., Laurel Archey, and Lanette Battles.

But Mowery taught these principles by living them. When a former 4-H member was seriously injured in an accident, Mowery wanted to help in some "small" way. She initiated a fund-raising auction to help offset the family's medical bills. With tremendous community support, organizers saw donations and help pouring in from churches, individuals, businesses, 4-H'ers and many others. It turned out to be a Friday night and all-day Saturday event at the Mifflin County Youth Park — shadowed by the news that the little girl had died. But Mowery's desire to help in a "small" way turned into a full-fledged community effort that raised $9,655 for the family.

At community club meetings, Mowery shared her leadership responsibilities with everyone, thus developing potential talents in others. "At the beginning of the year, February or March, leaders, parents, officers, members and even the little ones, met to plan the upcoming year. Ideas came from everyone. I'm a firm believer in delegation of responsibility. Members would take on certain tasks such as helping to set up future meetings and programs. Then we had a kick-off meeting. The extension office would send out cards and the 4-H news reporter would advertise it. We'd have booklets, too, listing upcoming events and meetings. Everyone knew what was going on." And all ideas had parent approval first.

Doling out responsibilities for Mowery wasn't done at random. "I feel for the development of that 4-H member, a leader must support and encourage them, give them as many opportunities as possible to develop the talents they have. I always looked for that in them. I felt it was important to get to know that individual. I try to see potential and develop that, things that might have remained dormant in a child."

But why 4-H?

"It's a wonderful educational program," Mowery states. "4-H opens the door for you to be involved and to have some opportunities and meet a lot of people you wouldn't normally meet. If a child becomes actively involved, there's lots of things to do such as Achievement Days, Dress Revues, being a camp counselor, Dale Carnegie courses, and much more."

Being a good leader involves hard work and dedication. Over the years, Mowery served as room chairperson at a leaders Forum at Penn State, been a judge for Demonstration Days in both Juniata and Centre Counties, helped at 4-H camp Penn Roosevelt when needed, served two five-year terms on the Extension Committee Board and two two-year terms as secretary, served as Exhibit Hall Coordinator at the Mifflin County Youth Fair, attended home economic and agricultural meetings, attended Pennsylvania Cooperative Council Extension Association meetings while on the Extension Board, chaperoned field trips including a county exchange with 4-H'ers from Wisconsin, attended the Extension annual meeting in State College, attended Legislative State Extension Capitol Days in Harrisburg, and toured the Agricultural Science and Industries Building at Penn State.

"I was running on reserve power then," Mowery admits, then goes onto talk about the changes she has seen over the years.

"I've been blessed to see the overall development of the 4-H program, to see local extension agents retire and new ones come on board. It's been a privilege and an honor."

Mowery's decision to retire from 4-H was not a easy one. Many laughingly told her she was the reason why the green building roof collapsed (due to snow) at the Mifflin County Youth Park — she wasn't supposed to get out of 4-H yet!

Giving up 4-H leadership was a hard decision, but looking ahead, Mowery sees things she wants to do. Her husband retires from Standard Steel in two years. Mowery halps run their 100-acre farm that includes their state licensed custom slaughtering and processing business. From October through the end of March, Mowery processes 200-300 deer and beef — six days a week. She also has her eye on the pond below their farm for fishing, may finish some quilt tops, repair some antiques, and get started on some calves to raise for beef.

"I might have a couple extra minutes to work on these now," Mowery said.

Mowery's years as a 4-H leader are packed with memories of skits, demonstrations, fashion shows, swimming parties, picnics, meetings, ice cream socials, corn boils, roller skating, and much, much more. But Mowery will never forget her main purpose as a leader - that 4-H is more than working on a specific project for the fair. It is working toward a finished product in the child.

With 28 years of service as 4-H project leader of the Decatur 4-H Club, Vivian Mowery reflects on leadership qualities when working with children and youth.

Reflecting on change. Mowery eyes the pond for fishing on their 100-acre McClure farm — something she's had little time to do in her 28 years as a 4-H leader.

You Ask ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? You Answer

In response to readers' questions, this column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for the answers. In the past, many readers sent non-cooking requests to Cook's Question Corner, a cooking column on page B 8.

"You Ask — You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. The concept is the same: When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask — You Answer, Lou Ann Good, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Recently, I had a visit from a mother and her grown son. The reason that they came was because I'd told them that I had letters that their husband and father wrote to me during World War II. There were some 60 of them written from training camps in the U.S. and from overseas.

During that war, I worked for a farm organization where 90% of the employees were men. So, I wrote to the young men and they answered my letters as it seems that they really looked forward to mail call. Many are short notes containing very little news. While some were censored and words were blacked out.

This winter, after rereading most of them, I phoned the survivors of the servicemen and so far only two parties have come to claim their relatives letters. I shall keep the rest a while longer.

People complain of animals eating their garden plants but one does not know how they feel until the same thing happens to you. The other night we went to cover our tomato plants and found nothing to cover. It was dusk and after searching I discovered some one-inch stubs. I'd thought that with a lot of cats around no rabbits would dare venture into my garden. I was wrong.

On a happier note, our daughter in Texas surprised me with a big bouquet of flowers on May Day. When she was a child living at home, she always picked flowers and lay them at the front door on May first. Then she knocked and ran away to hide and watch my surprise when I opened the door and found no one there. It is certainly nice to be remembered.

Dogwoods Disappearing From Landscapes

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Spring is a time when many people enjoy the blooms of ornamental trees and shrubs. But one popular flowering tree is disappearing from many landscapes.

Since the late 1970s, dogwood trees native to the eastern United States have suffered from stress and disease. The resulting decline in dogwood health and populations has made the plant's spectacular white floral display a rare sight in some areas.

"Scientists believe the primary cause is a fungus called Discula," says Dr. Gary Moorman, associate professor of plant pathology in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"It's thought that the fungus was inadvertently brought to the U.S. in the 1970s," he says. "It since has spread throughout the range of the native dogwoods. Because these trees have never before been exposed to the fungus, they are especially susceptible to attack."

The area affected by the decline ranges from southern Maine to northern Alabama. Trees in exposed sites seem most susceptible, but forest dogwoods also are dying.

Several symptoms are characteristic of dogwood decline. Twigs and lower branches die. Cankers, or abnormally roughened areas, form on twigs, branches and trunks. Dogwood borers attack the weakened tree. Water sprouts develop at the tree's base, then die. Tree growth slows. Eventually, the tree may die.

Discula is one of several fungi that cause a disease known as anthracnose. "It can produce brown spots up to one-fourth-inch in diameter on leaves," Moorman says. "Smaller, reddish-brown spots may pepper portions of the leaf or extend along veins.

"Large brown blotches of dead tissue may appear on leaf tips, along the margin of leaves or between the veins," he says. "Leaves on branch tips may be completely blighted and stay attached over winter. Lower twigs and branches may die."

The fungus overwinters in infected twigs and leaves that remain on the tree and in infected fallen leaves.

"This fungus also has been found on dogwood seeds," says Moorman. "Studies are under way to determine whether migrating songbirds are eating infected seeds, then spreading the fungus along their migration routes. Researchers also are looking at possible insect transmission of the disease."

Moorman says steps can be taken to protect healthy trees and to save trees not yet severely affected by decline:

• Promote tree vigor. During dry summer and autumn weather, water once every seven to 10 days to supply one inch of water. Fertilize moderately in the spring. Do not apply excessive nitrogen. Do not injure trees with lawnmowers.

• Remove sources of fungus. Rake and remove fallen leaves and twigs. Prune and destroy water sprouts and dead twigs and branches. Do this only during dry weather when plant surfaces are dry. Remove severely affected trees.

• Protect trees from pests. If necessasry, use fungicides to control anthracnose. In May and early June, control dogwood borer. When using pesticides, be sure to read and follow all directions and safety precautions on labels.

Maryland County Searches For Pageant Entries

WASHINGTON CO., Md. — The Washington County Dairy Princess Committee is searching for contestants for its annual pageant.

As part of a new state program, they will also be asking any young ladies between 13 and 16 years old who would like to represent the county's dairy industry. With the exception of age, dairy maids must meet all the same requirements as a princess.

Dairy maids will perform similar duties as the dairy princess, assisting her throughout the year. There will be no competition for the "princess-to-be's" at the area or state level.

Princesses make school and grocery store promotions, speak to farm and non-farm groups and appear on radio and television. They often make appearances at sporting events and fairs. Regional princesses participate in a training seminar and will compete in the state pageant Tuesday, July 26, in Frederick.

Qualifications have changed for the princess program. Contestants may be the daughter of one of the following: a dairy farmer, a dairy farm manager or herdsman or someone employed in a dairy-related industry (farm store, dairy cooperative, DHIA supervisor, feed supplier, veterinarian, milk inspector, etc.). Candidate may also be employed herself as one of the above or the owner of at least one dairy animal or enrolled in the dairy foods project in 4-H or FFA.

Contestants must be 16 years old as of the contest year and will not reach her 22nd birthday by December 31, of the contest year.

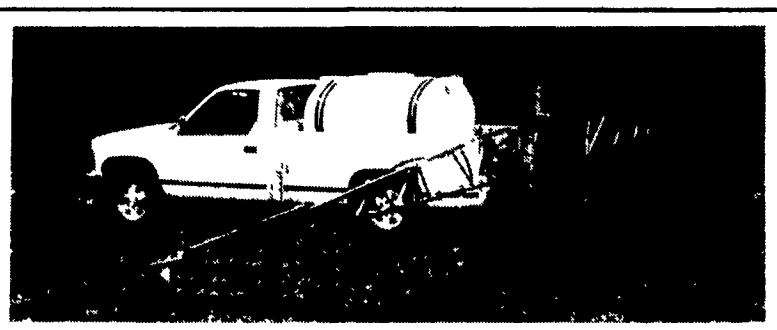
With a formed steel channel frame for extra durability and a tongue that attaches directly to the axle for maximum pulling strength, the chassis of the 502T is a rugged performer Axle choices include the single configuration or, for maximum stability, the tandem axle design. Axles are row crop adjustable from 60 inches to 80 inches and wheel hubs are the 6-bolt type. Wheel rims (10"x15") and tires (11Lx15, 6-ply) are also available.

Standard features for this sprayer include a loading platform and a 2,000 lb rated tongue jack. Boom Options: • 45' Hydraulic Fold & Level Boom
• 47½' & 60' Manual Fold Boom

SK400 Skid-Mount Sprayer



The Ag Chem SK400 Skid-Mounted Sprayer is an ideal system for a custom operator who wants to cover acres fast and efficiently It easily slides in and out of a standard pickup bed and is recommended for use with 3/4 ton or larger vehicles. When the unit is not being used, it rests on four conveniently built-in leg stands.

Our 47½ foot suspension boom features our unique 3 section quick-fold system (manually operated) and breakaway boom arms that automatically return to the spraying position after striking an obstruction. The boom is crop height adjustable, and its arms fold forward to rack along the side of the pickup bed. Hydraulic options include boom leveling and our new boom fold system.

Retired Population Has Mixed Impact

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The elderly can play an important role in preserving communities with stagnant or declining populations, but their impact appears to be much less on economic growth, suggests research conducted in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

To determine whether attracting more retirees to Pennsylvania's rural areas would be a useful development strategy, agricultural economists analyzed employment, considered local tax impacts, and conducted case studies in four rural Pennsylvania counties, including two with large numbers of relocated retirees and two whose elderly populations contain more long-time residents.

A total of 1,200 people were interviewed by telephone, and 43 government officials, business leaders and service providers were interviewed in person.

"Some rural communities are benefiting from an influx of wealthy retirees, but the mixed results of our study indicate that it may not work for all communities," says Dr. Timothy Kelsey, assistant professor of agricultural economics.

"Elderly and retired people are a major presence in rural Pennsylvania," Kelsey notes. "Pennsylvania has a higher percentage of elderly residents than any other state except Florida. Several counties have received sizable numbers of relocating retirees, and these counties also are among the most economically dynamic in the state."

But the economic impacts of the elderly are mixed, Kelsey says. "We found specific effects in local economies, but there is little evidence of large, direct benefits resulting from retirees relocating to Pennsylvania. Elderly and retired residents in rural communities can help existing downtowns survive, but usually cannot be relied on as a catatlyst for downtown resurgence or expansion.

"Our results suggests that the elderly support local merchants to a greater extent than the general population does," Kelsey says. "But older people tend to spend less than the general population, which reduces the positive impacts of their local shopping habits."

The study found evidence of more service-sector employment in communities with higher percentages of elderly growth, but the evidence was inconclusive.

"Many of the jobs resulting from retirees were low-wage service jobs providing few if any benefits," Kelsey says. "These included health aides, nursing home attendants and personal-home-care workers. Low reimbursements from Medicare and Medicaid limit the ability to increase the pay for such positions."

State and local tax bases benefit little from growing elderly and retired populations, because their income is largely exempt from both local and state taxation. "In the telephone survey, 61 percent of the income of the aged-in-place and 67 percent of the in-migrant elderly's income was exempt from taxation because it was from Social Security or pensions," Kelsey says.

"Continued growth in the number of elderly may further strain the state's ability to meet the needs of the elderly without providing a means to pay for their care."

This research was supported by the Center for Rural Pennsylvania.

Harness Shop Meets Needs Of Amish Community

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — It used to be, long ago, that everyone worked directly with what the good earth offered in order to provide for themselves. Hands churned milk into butter, readied the garden soil for the seeds they'd saved from the previous year, and wove straw from the fields into hats. Before machines, electricity, tractors, cars, and Walmarts, families literally lived off the land. It used to be a way of life.

Clear-cut edges and neat stitches are trademarks of bridles, harnesses and straps made in this harness shop.

Some would say 'used to be' is dead now, but the private lives of the Old Order Amish of Mifflin County attest to it differently. We always called them "white-toppers," in reference to the color of buggy they drive, and they live as close to the good earth's gifts as anyone.

One member of the Old Order Amish called my father his childhood friend, so the three of us talked. He said he didn't mind visitors to his harness shop as long as they obeyed the rules of decency — don't take advantage, don't steal, and don't come back to harass or vandalize.

Their privacy is important, but my father's friend fields visitor's questions with some of his own — do you go to church? He said I could write an article about his work if his name wasn't used or his address revealed.

Wasted space is one thing not to be found between the wood floor and low ceiling of the one-room harness shop. Walls are lined with shoes of all sizes, long work benches, and foot-powered sewing machines for stitching leather. And in between hang hooks, clips, chains, leather straps, bridles, and shelves of ointments and medicines for man or beast. The wood stove takes up the center of the room.

My father's friend makes horse bridles and straps. He said he orders the hides from Ohio, picking up examples to show us. Steer hides are more uniform in thickness throughout. Bull hides thicken at the neck of the hide and are harder to work with and sew.

Beside the bench he starts to unharness a cutting machine. He literally muzzeled the crank-handled machine for safety's sake. With a turn of the handle crank, he slips a tough 3/8th-inch leather scrap through the razor-like disk blades, cutting it like, as the saying goes, a hot knife through butter, leaving clean edges. Understandably, he re-muzzels the machine before showing us his stitching machines.

Leading us to one of two machines by a window, our friend shows us up close, like introducing one old friend to another, how this Champion Shoe Machine works. He says he bought it some 30 years ago and it wasn't new then.

Reaching for an already cut strap, he bends it in two and begins to sew sturdy white thread onto rich, brown leather. As he peddles — backwards — a punch pierces the leather from above, making a hole for the needle underneath. The punch and needle barely miss each other in the rapid succession of stitches. The needle moves forward taking the leather along with it, positioning it for the next stitch. Needles for this machine are hard to come by, so our friend takes great care. He files down an 8-penny nail for the punch if he needs another one. He sews heavier thicknesses of leather with this machine.

Standing just as tall as the other machine and as the men, the other heavy, iron sewing machine works more like the sewing machines of today, with a webbed plate feeding the leather on to the next stitch, the needle coming down from above. Our friend pushes metal pedals up and down with his feet to work this machine. He uses this Landis machine, from St. Louis, for sewing lighter leather.

Our friend tries to keep bridles stocked in his shop in matching pairs, for they use two horses to pull heavier wagons and even more to plow the fields. Tracers are straps that connect the horse to the buggy or wagon. The wide, heavy breeching band goes around the horses' buttock to hold the wagon back when going down hill. He also makes belly bands that hang underneath the horse.

Last of all, he shows us a slanted metal tray as wide as a table. At the bottom end is a barrel of oil. He dips his finished bridles and straps into the oil then lets them drain. This keeps the leather soft.

My father and I left that morning with a promise we could come back to learn how the women weave straw from the fields into wide-rimmed hats.

The Amish are often victims of the curious "English." But a measure of trust went both ways that day, for they sometimes make allowances for old childhood friends, willing to take trust a little bit further, the way it used to be. The way it should be.

Self-Protection Program

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension is sponsoring an educational program on Tuesday, May 24, from 9:45 a.m. - 2 p.m. at Allied Services on the Morgan Highway in Scranton to discuss the issues of self-protection by means of personal assertiveness, self-defense, and a healthy diet.

This year's program, entitled "Juggling Your Defenses," is open to the public.

The program will feature Karen Lazur, the director of education at the Victims Resource in Wilkes Barre. Lazur will present at a two-part program, "Protect Yourself — You're Worth It!" The first half of the workshop, "Personal Assertiveness" will focus on the prevention of victimization through personal awareness and the ability to make informed decisions.

The second portion of the workshop, "The Next Step" is designed to create an awareness of each participant's ability to defend themselves if confronted with a dangerous situation. Strategies to self-defend through the use of assertive skills and basic self-defense techniques will be addressed.

Mary Keihl, home economist with Penn State Cooperative Extension in Susquehanna County, will discuss how to protect against osteoporosis, a debilitating disease which affects the bones of over 25 million Americans, with a diet rich in calcium. Participants will taste some new, delicious ways to get calcium into their diets.

Reservations are $9 and must be made in advance by calling the Penn State Extension office at (717) 963-6842. A hot lunch will be served.

Laundry No-No's

Our great-grandmothers had laundry recipes that called for ingredients like lye soap, salt, vinegar and boiling water.

"Those recipes may have worked with cast-iron wash pots, steel laundry tubs and scrub boards, but they're no good for modern fabrics or automatic washers," say home economists from Whirlpool Corporation.

In fact, they report, salt and vinegar can be murder for an automatic washer's basket and tub. "Automatic washers are designed to handle alkaline detergents. "Substituting salt or vinegar for detergent in a soak or wash creates an acid condition which can pit porcelain and rust metal," they advise. And, they add, pitted porcelain can snag clothing while rust on the outer tub can stain wash loads.

"There are lots of common laundry practices that can damage automatic washer baskets and tubs by creating acidic conditions," warn the home economists. One is using the automatic washer as a hamper to collect and store urine-soaked diapers and bed linens, another is soaking items overnight in the washer.

"And poor practices aren't just restricted to washers. They happen with clothes dryers, too — and some are potential fire hazards," report Whirlpool home economists. These include drying newspapers, items that contain foam rubber and oil-soaked fabrics.

According to the home economists, drying oil-soaked fabrics, even after they've been laundered, can lead to an infrequent, but nonetheless dangerous situation called spontaneous combustion, which, in turn, can cause a piece of fabric (or pile of them) to burst into flame with no apparent cause of ignition.

This kind of spontaneous combustion occurs under conditions that appear to be related to recent changes in lifestyles and laundry practices.

To avoid throwaways, many of us are using washable cloth dish towels instead of paper towels to wipe out deep fat fryers and clean greasy rangetops and counters; and to save energy, we're washing more loads in warm or cold water.

Unfortunately, warm or cold water washing doesn't always get all the cooking oil out of the towels, and when those towels subsequently are dried in an automatic dryer and then folded and placed, still warm, in a laundry basket, you have unwittingly created the ideal environment for spontaneous combustion.

"The combination of oil-saturated fabric, laundry additives, high drying temperatures and compression of warm fabrics in a laundry basket or storage container promotes a chemical reaction that can cause spontaneous combustion," say the Whirlpool home economists.

They add, however, that while poor laundering practices can cause various problems, good laundering practices can solve them, and they offer these suggestions:

- Read and follow washer and dryer use and care guide instructions;
- Use only additives intended for use in automatic laundry appliances; never substitute salt, vinegar, ammonia, etc. for a laundry detergent;
- Don't use your washer for soaking loads overnight. Long soaking with strong chemicals can damage fabrics and the washer's basket and tub;
- Never use your washer to collect and store soiled, damp or urine-soaked items;
- Never dry fabrics that have foam rubber in or attached to them in your dryer. They can cause a fire.
- Avoid the possibility of spontaneous combustion. Use paper towels to clean oil-coated pots and pans and wipe up cooking oil spills; pretreat oil stained fabrics before washing and wash them in the hottest water available; and use a heavy-duty liquid laundry detergent for best removal of oily soils and stains.

Barricks Use Barn For Fascinating History

BETH MILLER
Cumberland Co. Correspondent

NEWVILLE (Cumberland Co.) — There are four floors of fascination in Harry and Revenna Barrick's barn.

That's because it isn't really a barn any more.

These days, it is the Barrick's Farm Museum and it is packed from floor to ceiling, largely with one of the most impressive collections of collectible toys you are likely to see anywhere.

Mrs. Barrick said it all started in 1976 when they bought their first toy tractor, which was an Oliver 1855, at the Silver Spring Flea Market near Mechanicsburg.

He bought that toy for a song then, she said. Today, she said, it is valued at between $175 to $185.

Over the same time, their collection of toy Oliver tractors has grown so much that the couple has no idea how many they actually have.

Revenna Barrick showing two special pieces from their collection, a Oliver Super 55 tractor with mounted two bottom plow worth approximately $1,500/$2,000 and an Oliver Gas Pump.

Most of that collection can be seen on the fourth floor of the museum.

The Barricks, who were dairy farmers until several years ago when they gave up farming to run their tire business full time, started building the museum two years ago. Harry and his son did most of the work.

Most of Barrick's tractor collection on the museum's fourth floor is not for sale.

The third and the second floors contain all kinds of farm toys from tractors to trucks, plus other types of collectible toys. Some of the toys are new and some are used.

The Barricks said they buy the toys from close-out sales and auctions.

"we go a couple of times a week to buy," said Mrs. Barrick.

None of the items at the museum can be bought at a regular retail store, she said. Some of the rarer items they have are horses, wagons, and trucks that are handcrafted by Amish from Indiana.

Not only do they have toy farm equipment, the Barricks carry popular toy gas company trucks like those made for Hess and Winross, plus airplanes and motorcycles.

Mrs. Barrick said she recently got hooked on collecting toy banks, which usually are made to look like trucks or tractors. Those range in price from $10 to $700, she said.

The Barricks said their customers come from all over, from places like Canada and North and South Carolina. They advertise their museum in toy magazines, they said, and every year they attend the National Farm Toy Show held the first week of November in Dyersville, Iowa.

The Barricks even have something for people who aren't interested in toys.

That is Mr. Barrick's collection of more than 300 old tractors. He has restored many of them and they are on display on the first floor of the museum.

People who come to the museum are sure to find something they llike, even if it is just a memory.

"A lot of our customers are people who didn't have many toys as kids," said Mrs. Barrick. "We have one older gentleman who comes just to look around. He says it brings back memories."

4-H Babysitting Course

LANSDALE (Montgomery Co.) — A six-week course, "4-H Babysitting and Child Care" will be offered at the Lansdale Public Library this summer on Wednesday evenings from 7-8:30 p.m. The course begins on June 1, runs for five weeks, skips a week and then concludes on July 13. The normal fee of $5 is being waived at this time, because of a special grant from the Lansdale Kiwanis Club, who will be sponsoring this course in cooperation with the Montgomery County 4-H Program. All course materials will be provided.

The following topics will be covered: babysitter's responsibilities, child development, and appropriate toys for a child's age, feeding, diapering, infant care, first aid and sitter safety. Those who satisfactorily complete the course will receive a 4-H achievement certificate. The course will be taught by Carolyn Fritz, 4-H Program Assistant. Volunteers from the community will also assist in teaching first aid and sitter safety. Class size is limited. To register for the course call Helaine Brown, 4-H Agent, at (215) 489-4315.

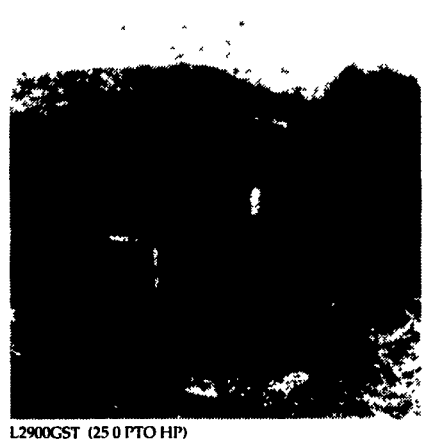
L2350DT (20 5 PTO HP)



L2900GST (25 0 PTO HP)

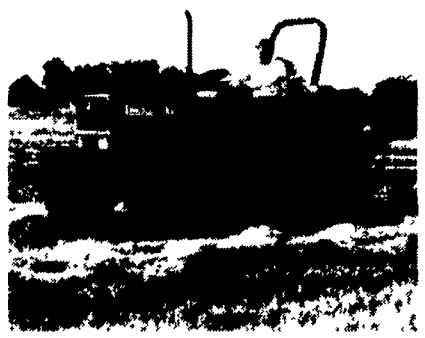
Kubota has a tractor that's just the right size for your vineyard, orchard, farm or ranch. Models range from 14 to 91 PTO horsepower. They feature Kubota liquid-cooled diesel engines, dependable hydraulics, and a standard 3-point hitch to let you attach a wide range of implements.

The B2150HSD is compact in size but has lots of power. Hydrostatic transmission, 4WD, and power steering make light work of loading, tilling or spraying.

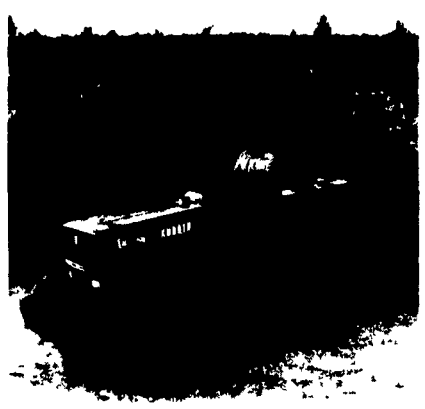
Economy and value are built into the L2350. Performance Matched Implements from Kubota include a rotary tiller, front loader, mower, snowblower, backhoe and post-hole digger.

The new L2900GST features the innovative Glideshift Transmission. This provides clutchless shift-on-the-go operation, and smooth forward and reverse shuttle shifting.

Our M4030SU utility tractor specializes in doing just about everything. With a smooth powerful five cylinder diesel engine and 42 PTO HP, it can help you with planting, cultivating, or bringing in the hay.



M4030SU (42 0 PTO HP)



M7030DTN B (68 0 PTO HP)

The M7030DTN-B is our narrow tractor built to work between your trees or vines. Unique bevel gear 4WD gives you extra pulling power, and bi-speed turn provides the ability to make tight turns in narrow spaces. There are 16 forward speeds, ranging from creep at 0.25 mph to travel speed at 15.6 mph.

There are bigger models, and smaller ones. There are taller ones (mudders) and shorter ones (low profile). Your Kubota dealer can help fit the tractor that's just the right size for you.

WHAT IS CHEESE? Cheese is the solid portion (curd) of milk, separated from the liquid portion (whey) by heating and fermentation (addition of harmless cultures). It takes approximately 10 pounds (or five quarts) of milk to make one pound of cheese.

CHARACTERISTICS: The appearance, texture and flavor of cheese are determined by the temperature at which it is cured (aged), the length of time it is cured, and the enzymes that are added during the curing process.

"Natural cheese" is cheese that has not been processed by blending and pasteurizing. Natural cheeses are categorized by the strength of their flavor: mild, mellow and robust ("strong"); and by their hardness: a) hard grating = aged the longest, granular in appearance with a sharp flavor; e.g.: Parmesan and Romano; b) hard = smooth, with or without eyes ("holes"), easy to slice with flavors ranging from mild to sharp; e.g.: Cheddar, Colby, Gouda, and Swiss; c) semisoft = may appear smooth or crumbly and soft; e.g.: Blue Cheese, Brick, Muenster, Monterey Jack and Mozzarella (sometimes also considered "soft"); d) soft = fresh varieties, such as Cream, Cottage and Ricotta; or cured varieties such as Brie, Limburger and Feta.

Pasteurized Process Cheese is a smooth blending of natural cheeses, pasteurized by heating to the point where all further ripening stops. Pasteurized Process Cheese Food includes up to 49% of additional concentrates or mixtures of other dairy products. Pasteurized Process Cheese Spreads are lower in fat but higher in moisture, and do not need to be refrigerated.

Cold Pack Cheese is a blend of natural cheeses that are not heated during manufacturing, and often have spices and other flavorings added. Cold Pack Cheese Food has optional additional dairy items added, as well as an acidifying agent, water, salt, color, spices and or sweetening agent.

NUTRITION Natural cheese is a source of many of the nutrients found in milk, such as calcium, protein, phosphorus and Vitamin B. The specific nutrient content of a cheese depends on the quality of milk used, the type of cheese manufactured, and the manufacturing process itself.

A one-ounce serving of natural cheese is generally 100 calories — 100 "nutrient-dense", not "empty calories". Cheese is up to 99% digestible, and because it is lower in lactose than milk, it is an excellent source of nutrition (especially calcium) for people who are lactose-sensitive.

Delaware 4-H'ers Help Flood Victims

NEWARK, Del. — When last summer's rain was flooding the nation's farmland in the Midwest, a 4-H club in Delaware felt a responsibility to help the victims any way they could.

As the Sussex County Lord Baltimore club prepared baked goods for entry in the Delaware State Fair, they decided to sell the surplus goods in a bake sale to benefit a 4-H club in Iowa.

After consulting with 4-H offices in both states, leader Sally Ford sent the club's check to the Harrison Zippers in Eddyville, Iowa.

But that's just the start of the story. In October, Zippers club leader, Sharon Ferguson, came east for a class reunion and made it a point to visit the Lord Baltimore club. She brought slides of the club members, tales and pictures of the flooding, and the message that one kind act deserves another.

The Harrison Zippers 4-H Club chose to spend the donation in a way that would benefit many people. They bought books for the local library to replace those that had been damaged or lost, and bought paint to refurbish damaged playground equipment.

"It's really neat when two clubs can meet like this," said Joy Sparks, University of Delaware state 4-H program coordinator. "They learn that caring for their community means more than caring for their club, their county, and even their state. It's a wonderful way to broaden their commitment to service."

The two clubs that met because of misfortune are creating a fortune of friendship. They have decided to stay in touch as pen pals.

Cheese Facts

STORAGE

Natural cheese should be kept in its original wrapper, or any wrapper that will create a barrier to moisture, such as plastic wrap. Since cheese will pick up odors from other foods, be sure it is freshly rewrapped each time it is opened.

Cheese should always be refrigerated (40°F), and after serving, the unused portions should be refrigerated. Cheese may be frozen if necessary, but frozen cheese is best used in cooking.

If cheese does dry out, grate the hard pieces and storein an air-tight jar and use in cooking.

Stronger-flavored cheeses, such as Brie or aged Brick, should be kept in air-tight containers to prevent the strong flavors from being transferred to other foods.

MOLDS

Undesirable molds are those that develop on natural cheeses that are improperly wrapped. Certain cheeses, such as Blue Cheese, are mold-ripened, so the mold is not undesirable. Although most "undesirable" molds are harmless, some may produce toxins, so to be safe, discard a half-inch of cheese on all sides of the visible mold.

COOKING

The secret to successful cheese cookery is to use low temperatures. Cheese tends to become tough and stringy when overcooked. In the oven, cook at 325° to 375°F. With pizza, cook between 350° and 400°.

In sauces, add cheese at the end of the prescribed cooking time, and heat until cheese is melted.

Shred natural cheese and cube or slice processed cheese when adding it to hot foods for quicker melting.

When broiling a cheese-topped dish, keep cheese four to five inches from the heat source and watch it closely. To save time, use pre-cut cheese.

When topping casseroles, add cheese near the end of the baking time.

When microwaving cheese, use lower power settings (30% to 70% power). Stir and rotate as often as recipe directs.

MEASURING

Measure cheese by weight, especially if it is shredded or cubed.

Four ounces of natural or processed cheese equals one cup when shredded. Three ounces of a hard-grating cheese, such as Parmesan, equals one cup when grated. Four ounces of crumbled Blue Cheese equals one cup.

Save on labor by purchasing pre-shredded, pre-grated and pre-crumbled cheeses.

SERVING

Cheese can be served alone, or mixed with other ingredients. It can be sliced, diced, shredded, grated or melted. When not served as part of a recipe, cheese is best served at room temperature. Hard cheese will come to room temperature when outside the refrigerator for about an hour; semisoft cheese takes less than an hour.

TRY SOMETHING NEW

Cheese and fruit are excellent snack or dessert partners: Swiss, ham and mellon balls; Cheddar, apples and nuts; Blue and pears or cherries; Ricotta, oranges and cranberry bread; Muenster, pumpernickel and assorted berries; Caraway Brick, hard sausage and applesauce; Provolone, grapes and hearty crackers; Cream cheese mixed with apricots and toasted almonds served with wheat biscuits or scones; Gouda and nectarines; Brie, strawberries and crusty French bread; Blue cheese blended with butter and spread on pear slices.

Substitute a new cheese to add some excitement to a favorite recipe: use Colby or Gouda in addition to cheddar; blend Asiago or Romano with Parmesan; use Provolone in addition to Mozzarella; bake Brie (and top with sliced almonds), instead of serving at room temperature; melt natural cheese or cold pack to serve over potatoes.

Tapered hopper is interlocked then riveted together for strong construction made from 18 ga. steel. No danger of coming apart as spot welded construction. No thin spots as spun tapered hopper. The design must be good since our competition copied it We don't spin our hopper. When you spin metal you get weak points. This is a critical area since the hogs are rubbing against it Also, on our feeder if one spot does wear through it can be replaced If a spun hopper wears out you have to replace the entire hopper

HOW CALCIUM IS TRANSPORTED TO THE EGGSHELL

Dr. Carol V. Gay
Professor Of Molecular And Cell Biology
And Poultry Science

Egg-laying hens have a remarkable capacity to handle calcium. It is well documented that calcium in feed is readily absorbed by the intestine by a process that requires Vitamin D.

After passing through the intestinal lining, calcium moves into the bloodstream, where it binds to a protein called vitellogenin, a unique substance capable of carrying large amounts of calcium to various parts of the body. When vitellogenin-bound calcium arrives in the shell gland, seconds after being absorbed by the intestine, it is released and taken up by the shell gland tissue if an egg is present. (If an egg is not present, calcium is stored in bone.) The structure of the shell gland is ideally suited to forming eggshells which are made mainly of calcium carbonate.

There are basically two types of cells in the shell gland. One type forms a sheet that stretches over the calcifying eggshell and thereby lines the shell gland. The other type forms little tubes, called tubules, that lie beneath the sheet of lining cells where they intermingle with numerous blood vessels. The tubules open into the space occupied by the egg. All these structures are readily seen in a microscope; however, the presence of so many blood vessels is obvious upon dissection. A fresh shell gland is a robust shade of dark red.

For calcium to reach the eggshell, it must pass out of the blood vessels into the space around the vessels and across either the sheet of lining cells or into the tubules. Twenty years ago, researchers, using the available techniques to trap calcium, suggested that the lining cells were responsible for the transfer of calcium. It was a reasonable suggestion that has turned out to be incorrect. Now, with the advent of new microscopic methods, it is clear that calcium moves across the tubule cells and is pumped into the tubules where it can flow into the space occupied by the egg.

The new methods, developed over the last few years, include a stain for marking another calcium carrying protein that moves calcium through the cells of the tubule walls. This special protein is called calbindin and is made by tubule cells only in the presence of estrogen.

A second method was developed that allows an investigator to look in a microscope and locate the position of calcium pumps. In this manner, a "calcium pump" was found on the side of the cell that faced the inside of the tubule. These studies have made it clear what route the calcium takes.

Calcium diffuses into a tubule cell from the side closest to blood vessels. It moves through the cell bound to calbindin and finally it is pumped out of the cell by an energy-requiring pump (another unique protein) into the tubule.

It is anticipated that the best laying hens will have high levels of the unique proteins that are involved in moving calcium along its complicated pathway. However, little is understood about the biochemistry and genetics that directs this highly orchestrated physiological process.

N.Y. Young Sire Evaluation Sale Held

EATON, N.Y. — Bull prices were strong and demand was good at the New York Young Sire Evaluation Sale held at the Cornell T & R Center in New Hartford on April 23. The 16 bulls in the sale sold at an overall average price of $1328.

The top-selling bull was a Polled Hereford from Sapp Valley View Farm in Buckhannon, W. Va. and sold for $2,700 to Temperance Hill Farm, Cazenovia, N.Y. The top-selling Angus bull, bred and owned by Phil Taylor of Dancote Farm, Lawtons, N.Y., solf for $1,950.

Breed averages for the five breeds represented in the sale were Polled Hereford, $1,894; Angus, $1,630; Limousin, $1,500; RX-s, $916; and Simmental, $1,250.

The Young Sire Evaluation Program is an on-farm based program that evaluates bulls based on their expected progeny differences (EPDs). EPDs are an extremely important tool used by breeders for sire selection.

Final evaluation before the sale included breeding and structural soundness, rib eye area and backfat thickness measurements, yearling weight and weight per day age, frame score and health status and certification. With this detailed information available, producers can choose a herd sire which will best suit their herd and breeding program.

The Young Sire Evaluation Program is cosponsored by Cornell Cooperative Extension and the New York Beef Cattlemen's Association.

For more information on this program or other activities related to beef cattle production, contact the NYBCA Executive Secretary Carol Gillis at (315) 684-7114 or write to P.O. Box 246, Eaton , NY 13334.

Capital Budget Funds Released For Farm Show Floor

HARRISBURG (May 6) — Gov. Robert P. Casey released $1.3 million in state capital budget funds for a project to replace flooring in the main exhibition area of the State Farm Show Complex.

The project will provide a new, non-skid concrete surface for more than 146,000 square feet of exhibition space.

"The floor project is continuing evidence of the commonwealth's commitment to supporting the agricultural sector, the leading industry for Pennsylvania's economy year after year," Gov. Casey said.

"In recent years, we have replaced heating, lighting, sound systems, and the roof of the Large Arena. We also enlarged the Farm Show with the addition of the Livestock Exhibition Hall, which added nearly two acres to the building," the governor said.

The governor thanked Rep. William Lloyd, chairman of the House Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee and Sen. Patrick Stapleton, minority chairman of the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, for their efforts to secure the project.

The facility each January houses the Pennsylvania State Farm Show, one of the world's largest infoor agricultural exhibits.

The floor to be replaced is asphalt tile that offers poor traction for hoofed animals.

The Farm Show Complex is being used for an increasing number of agricultural and nonagricultural exhibitions. More than 60 events are scheduled this year in the complex, in addition to more than 20 Harrisburg Heat indoor soccer games.

Work on the Main exhibition Building floor will be completed during the summer months so that construction does not disrupt other activities within the Farm Show Complex.

The governor's action to release the funding will allow the Department of General Services to advertise for construction bids for the project, which already has been designed.

The project is part of the state capital budget, which finances the design and construction of public facilities through the sale of government bonds.

Scientists Tackle Dead Bird Disposal

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Candy bars may help poultry farmers deal with a serious problem — what to do with all their dead birds.

Penn State poultry scientist Paul Patterson is researching environmentally sound and cost-effective methods for dead bird and hatchery waste disposal. Among the most promising is fermenting the waste and recycling its nutrients back in the the feed stream.

This is where the candy bars come in. Patterson's approach is to grind and mix the carcasses with a carbohydrate — in this case, candy bar waste from a confections company — and ferment the mixture in a sealed, anaerobic container.

Early studies show that broilers fed a diet containing up to 30 percent of these fermented by-products perform as well as those receiving corn and soybean rations. "If this process were used to recycle all the dead birds that are now buried or incinerated," Patterson said, "it could reclaim more than $100 million worth of nutrients a year."

Besides wasting valuable nutrients, traditional disposal methods can cause environmental problems. "Burying dead birds can contribute to groundwater contamination," said Patterson, assistant professor of poultry science in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "Burning them is expensive and can cause odor problems. With concern for air and water quality rising, these practices are declining."

Poultry mortality rates from disease and other causes can reach 5 percent for broilers and up to 7 percent for layers. Nationally, more than 360 million birds weighing a combined 470,000 tons die prematurely each year. Hatchery waste, including eggshells, unhatched eggs and dead birds, presents a similar disposal problem.

Pennsylvania has one of the largest poultry industries in the country. With more than 140 million chickens and turkeys, the state's producers must dispose of millions of dead birds annually.

"Rendering, or recycling carcasses by cooking, has been used for years," Patterson said. "But traditional rendering presents problems. Transportation costs can be high, especially for farmers located outside or near the edge of a rendering company's hauling radius.

"The farmer must pay to refrigerate the carcasses between pickups," he said. "And because dead birds often have viruses or bacteria, transporting them could spread diseases to other farms."

Using the fermenting process, farmers could store this material at room temperature without fear of spoilage until enough has accumulated to make transporting it to a rendering facility economical. "The acidic conditions also preserve nutrients and kill most disease pathogens," said Patterson.

Composting is another dead bird disposal option that is growing in popularity. "Composting is not a new technology, but it's a proven one," said John Schwartz, director of Penn State Cooperative Extension in Lancaster County.

In this method, dead birds are layered in a bin with manure and poultry litter or straw. "During composting, the temperature reaches up to 140 degrees," said Schwartz. "That kills any disease microorganisms and reduces fly problems."

After seven to 10 days, the material is moved to a second bin, where the cycle is repeated. "When it's finished, you have an inert, humus-like material that makes an excellent soil amendment," Schwartz said.

FAIR DAYS

Four Shows Announced For Allentown Fair

The Great Allentown Fair announces four of its six grandstand concerts for the 1994 exposition running Aug. 30-Sept. 5.

Kicking off the shows as he did last year, singer-songwriter Barry Manilow returns to the Fair Wednesday, Aug. 31. Country music fans get a heaping-helping of entertainment starting with Alan Jackson on Friday, Sept. 2, continuing with Vince Gill on Saturday, Sept. 3 and culminating with Reba McEntire and John Michael Montgomery on the same bill for Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 5.

Tickets for all four concerts go on sale at the Fair Box Office starting at 8 a.m. on Tuesday, May 24. They also can be purchased that day at Ticketmaster locations or by dialing Ticketmaster charge-by-phone after 9 a.m. at (215)-336-2000 or (717)-693-4100. Mail orders, which are filled after the first day of sale, can be sent to the box office.

Barry Manilow played to a full grandstand during his first-ever Fair appearance last year. He plans to vary this year's show which is a continuation of his "Greatest Hits" tour.

Most of the 25 consecutive top-40 hits he composed Manilow sings and performs at the piano. On lively renditions like "Copacabana" and "It's A Miracle," Manilow joins back-up singers and dancers in lavish stage productions.

Alan Jackson has gone from unknown to top country superstar status in rapid pace. Another singer-songwriter, Jackson scored big with his "Here In The Real World" single in 1980. He followed with "Don't Rock The Jukebox" and "Chattahoochee," which just last week won the Academy of Country Music's best single of the year.

Jackson co-hosted the Academy's award ceremonies with Reba McEntire who, with seven, tied him for the most award nominations. He picked up best album of the year honors for "A Lot About Living' (And a Little 'Bout Love)." His three albums in four years have exceeded 8.7 million in sales.

On the country scene since 1985, Vince Gill hit a career high capturing the Country Music Association's (CMA's) coveted Entertainer of the Year Award for 1993. His album "I Still Believe in You" and its title track racked up two Grammys and two more CMA awards for the year. He also took honors at The Academy of Country Music's awards being named as top male vocalist of the year.

Together on one bill at the Fair, Rebae McEntire and John Michael Montgomery is a pairing of pinnacle success and rising stardom.

More than just the reigning queen of country music, McEntire has achieved celebrity status stretching beyond her vocal career. While the flaming redhead became famous for her feisty performance on stage and top-selling recordings, she has pursued an acting career starring in big screen and television movies. Her latest release, a Rob Reiner film entitled "North," is due out this spring.

McEntire is also receiving much national magazine and talk-show attention for her newly-out autobiography, "Reba McEntire, My Story."

Montgomery is among the new breed of country male performers who have catapulted to fame by incorporating into their sound musical influences from the late '70s and early '80s. With his second album released in February, "Kickin' It Up," he became only the third country artist to crack the No. 1 spot of Billboard magazine's top 200 chart.

This crossover appeal helped him to win the American Music Award's favorite new country artist this year. "I love the Way You Love Me" was named the Academy of Country Music's best song of the year and Montgomery was picked as the Academy's best new male vocalist.

Tickets on the open-air track and in the covered grandstand are $22.50 for the Manilow and McEntire/Montgomery dates, $21 for Jackson and $19.50 for Gill. All shows begin at 7:30 p.m.

The Fair Box Office, located east of the grandstand on the fairgrounds at 17th and Chew streets, will be open from 8 a.m.-7 p.m. on Tuesday, May 24, from 1-7 p.m. Wednesday-Friday, May 25-28, and from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. every Saturday thereafter.

Mail orders are accepted by writing Tickets, The Allentown Fair, 302 N. 17th St., Allentown, PA 18104. Mail orders must be accompanied by a $2-ticket handling charge which provides admission to the Fair.

Round Baler Delivers Quality Bales

ATLANTA, Ga. — With its all-new 565T round baler, AGCO Hesston delivers the unlimited workability and versatility the farmer has come to expect to consistently produce high density, top quality bales in sizes to fit large baler operations.

The 565T is a variable chamber, semi-automatic baler that is ideal for operators with large cattle herds, feedlots, dairy, and custom applications. Its unique open-throat design and high capacity vertical bale chamber, capable of producing a bale up to 75-inches tall and 61.5-inches wide, weighing up to 2,200 pounds, affords the farmer increased productivity and less field time.

A new driving sensor system, for example, incorporates a belt sensor on each side of the baler to continuously monitor the tension of the two outside belts. Connected to an array of driving arrows on the in-cab control box, the system instructs the driver to steer left or right depending upon which side of the bale needs to be filled. The operator simply follows the arrows until the top of the bale is square, guaranteeing dense, uniform bales.

MF 3075 Has Productive Features Of Larger Tractors

NORCROSS, Ga. — Massey Ferguson's new 86 PTO horsepower MF 3075 tractor is designed with many features common to tractors over 100 horsepower.

"This combination of 'big' tractor features in an easier-to-maneuver chassis gives farmers the dual-purpose versatility they are looking for today," said Doug Petterson, Massey Ferguson tractor marketing manager.

The wastegate turbocharged 1000 Series Quadram™ powered diesel engine features a unique four-lobed piston crown design to maximize air and fuel mixing for more efficient combustion. The result is more power and torque output with less fuel consumption, resulting in greater productivity.

Standard PTO and economy PTO modes are selected with a hand lever. Standard PTO achieves rated speeds at 2000 engine RPM, while economy PTO achieves rated speeds at 1550 engine RPM.

Case, Dealers Join To Fund Scholarships

RACINE, Wis. — J I Case and participating Case IH dealerships are working together to offer scholarships to young people attending area trade schools and technical colleges.

"Because we're committed to giving our customers the best product support possible, we want to help students acquire the technical and professional skills they need to work in Case IH dealerships," said Herman Kosten, J I Case vice president dealer sales-North America.

"Many of our dealers have expressed concern about finding highly skilled personnel," Kosten said. "Through this program, we cooperate with participating dealers to sponsor one student per year per dealership."

Reimbursement includes annual tuition, fees, and books up to $1,700. Local dealers determine scholarship criteria.

Crop Certifications Due

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) is currently accepting acreage reports for the 1994 farm programs. Farmers have until June 15 to report the sizes and intended uses of their wheat, oats, barley, rye, and other fall-seeded small grains.

"Small grain crops that are not reported by this deadline will be ineligible for program benefits," ASCS official Richard Troutman said.

Before reporting, farmers can request that ASCS measure their program acreage. The measurements are furnished at cost, and guaranteed for the crop year. Troutman said measurement service is not only valuable to program participants, but to any farmer who desires an accurate acreage for any reason.

Farm program participants are required to correctly certify their entire farm after planting to be eligible for price support loans, deficiency payments, and other benefits.

ASCS official Richard Troutman urges producers who have not certified their fall-seeded crops to do so before the June 15 deadline.

Ciba Seeds Expands Testing Of Corn Borer Resistant Hybrids

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Ciba Seeds has received an extension of its experimental use permit from the EPA for implementing field testing of corn hybrids resistant to the European Corn Borer (ECB).

Seventy-eight test plots in more than 20 states and Puerto Rico will be planted this spring with hybrids and inbreds containing a genetic constituent of the naturally occurring soil bacterium, bacillus thuringiensis (Bt), which produces a protein targeted for controlling the European corn borer. Field testing will be conducted in hybrid strip tests, research station trials, and university trials.

For additional information, call Tracy Neff, Product development agronomist, Hoffman Seeds, Inc. Landisville, (800) 776-7929.

New 38 HP Ford Economy Tractor

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The new Ford Model 3415 tractor from Ford New Holland offers exceptional power and work capacity in an economical package, said product manager Dave Dell.

This tractor has a lower purchase price and its economical 4-cylinder diesel engine is miserly in fuel consumption, he said.

With 38 PTO horsepower, the "3415" has a high power-to-weight ratio for tillage and grading work. A 12x4 mechanical transmission offers a wide choice of forward and reverse speeds for estate work, mowing, cultivating, and farmstead chores.

Hydrostatic power steering aids maneuverability for work in tight quarters and simplifies front end loader work. The tractor has Category I 3-point hitch.

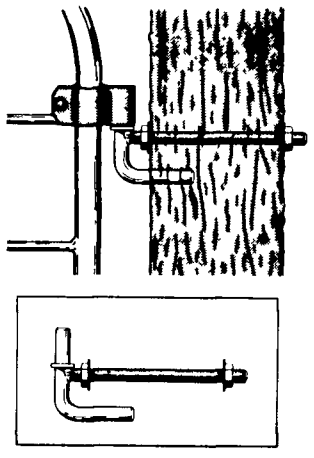
Gallagher Introduces Gate Hardware

HOUSTON, Texas — A new line of gate hardware, including some pieces with innovative designs that overcome long-standing gate problems, has been introduced by Gallagher Power Fence, Inc. of San Antonio, Texas.

The galvanized, electroplated, steel gate components are of superior quality and distinctive design. The one-hand gate latch and through-post gate hanger are designed to overcome two of the most common problems with conventional gates.

The one-hand gate latch comes with either a spring-loaded or gravity-activated locking mechanism. Both models are durable, effective, and easily operated with one hand.



The through-post gate hanger, from Gallagher Power Fence, Inc., eliminates the problem of the shaft turning in the post by having a second shaft, without threads, which penetrates the post below and parallel to the primary, threaded shaft.

"IT IS TIME TO ONCE AGAIN GET SERIOUS ABOUT STORING YOUR VALUABLE FEEDS!!!"

The recent "innovations" and temporary methods of storing your grains and forages are just not protecting your feeds like they should, nor are they really efficient.

Research and practical experience has shown that "the tower silo has never been equalled in its ability to protect your forage quality." And remember..." on most dairy farms, forage quality is the single most important factor affecting profit."

Contact us soon to be sure you get on our schedule to have your poured concrete tower silo constructed in time!

WARNING!

An odorless, colorless, invisible--and costly--forage thief!

You can't see it--and you can't stop it. Storage losses in forage can steal your valuable crop--how much is lost depends upon how you store your feed:

- Tower Silos have Up to 8% loss
- Bunkers have Up to 45% loss*

If the average difference in feed lost between tower silos and bunkers is 30%, then storage of 1000 tons will mean 300 tons MORE lost in a bunker. If silage is valued at $30 per ton, the additional losses from bunker storage would be $9000 a year.

For information on losses for all types of crop storage methods, contact the Crop Storage Institute for your free copy of " Methods of Crop Storage" and "Know the Facts."

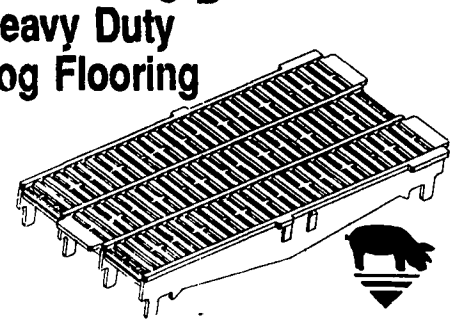
Heavy Duty Hog Flooring



Time Tested and Proven

This style of POLYGRATE was first introduced in 1981. Over the years Faroex has continued to refine this product. POLYGRATE is one of only a few "World Class" floors that has stood this test of time.

Outstanding Traction

POLYGRATE'S unique "high-low" finger design provides outstanding traction for pigs of all sizes, while enhancing safety and comfort.

- ♦ POLYGRATE'S rounded corners minimize injuries. The edges are bevelled providing a smoother, safer surface that promotes comfort, too.

What Does This All Add Up To?

- ♦ More piglets survive until weaning
- ♦ Less splay/spraddle leg problems
- ♦ Heavier piglets at weaning
- ♦ Better conditioned sows at weaning

MIRACLE FEEDS . . . HER SOURCE FOR BREWERS WET GRAINS

Have You Considered Making BWG a Part of Your Herd's Program?

Brewers wet grains are an alternate part of many dairy rations in this area because they:

- Are very economical.
- Are concentrated and provide protein, energy and digestible fiber in a very efficient manner.
- Provide a significant quantity of bypass protein.
- Are an effective way to extend your forage when it is in short supply.
- Enhance the nutritional content of poor quality forage.
- Are flexible . . .can be used with McNess vitamin and mineral premixes in either grain mixes or TMR's (total mixed rations).

Brewers wet grains from Miracle/McNess also offer you the bonus of free ration balancing. We can test your forage and balance your feedstuffs to get the most out of your program. Just call toll-free 800-888-0230.

NAXCEL FOR PIGS

Naxcel's approval for use in swine about one year ago is considered by many to be significant for the hog industry.

Naxcel is a broad spectrum drug, with activity that surpasses many antibiotics at our disposal. Its label claims include several respiratory pathogens, and one more item makes this drug rather unique — it has no withdrawal.

Drug Activity

Naxcel is Upjohn's trade name for ceftiofur, an antibiotic characterized as a cephalosporin. That puts it in the same general class as penicillin, but it's advanced several steps (or generations) beyond that of the original antibiotic.

An early process with any potential drug is to assess it in vitro, a term that roughly means evaluation in a test tube. The result is usually reported as an MIC — minimal inhibitory concentration. This is the smallest concentration of drug, under these "test tube" conditions that will stop the growth of a particular bacteria. In general, the lower the MIC, the better.

The bacteria that are stopped with a fairly low MIC of ceftiofur include a long list of beasts that tend to wreck havoc within the hog industry:

- Gram negatives: Pasteurella haemolytica, Pasteurella multocida, Haemophilus somnus, Haemophilus pleuropneumoniae, E. coli, Salmonella cholerasuis, Salmonella typhimurium.
- Gram positives: Corynebacterium pyogenes, Staph. aureus, Strep. agalactiae, Strep. bovis, Strep. dysgalactiae, Strep. suis type II, Strep uberis.

With all of these bacteria, and under these in vitro conditions, Ceftiofur shows good activity compared to Ampicillin, another "advanced generation" antibiotic in the same class as penicillin. Ceftiofur is not particularly effective against Bordatella, Pseudomonas or Mycoplasma.

Animal Testing

Follow-up testing in the animal indicated that the drug concentrations in plasma and tissues are consistently above the MICs for the sensitive organisms listed above. This implies that after injection of the drug, most of these bacteria can be controlled in the pig as well as in the test tube.

Testing in the pig has been documented for Colibacillosis (E. Coli scours). The drug is not labeled for E. coli — however, approval is anticipated.

The label indications for swine include four respiratory pathogens — Actinobacillus (Haemophilus) pleuropneumoniae, Pasteurella multocida, Salmonella cholerasuis and Strep. suis type 2.

Concentrations of the drug in the tissue, though high enough to control bacterial growth, are below the maximum allowable safe concentrations for safe human consumption — even a few hours after injection. For example, noninjection site muscle has an maximum allowable safe concentration of 3 ppm. Following three injections, at the maximum dose, the drug level in noninjection site muscle is .76. The maximum for injection site muscle is 30 ppm. The observed concentration in the muscle tissue at injection sites is only 2.90 ppm.

Label Highlights

Naxcel is available only upon the order of a licensed veterinarian — that is, a prescription. There is no withdrawal period. This a bit incredible for an injectable. But it's because the tissue levels drop quickly, yet are high enough to limit bacterial growth.

The drug is packaged as a sterile powder in an injection vial containing either one or four grams of ceftiofur. The material in the one-gram vial is mixed with 20 ml of sterile water. The four-gram product is reconstituted with 80 ml of sterile water. Sterile water must be purchased separately.

The unreconstituted product can be stored long-term in the refrigerator. After reconstitution, it must be used within 7 days, because the antibiotic is unstable in water and soon loses its effectiveness. The reconstituted product can be frozen for prolonged storage and later thawed under hot water. Approval is apparently being sought for a ready-to-use product that can be stored long-term.

The antibiotic is administered intramuscularly at the rate of 1 cc per 22 to 37 pounds of body weight.

The cost of the reconstituted product will range from $.40-.60 per ml.

Field Trials
Field Results 1

Paul Armbrecht, a veterinarian from Lake City, Iowa, conducted a field study in a farrow-to-finish complex which included 3,500 sows. The herd was experiencing upper respiratory problems including Mycoplasma and Pasteurella D. The original herd health program included:

- Vaccinate sow herd with Atrophic rhinitis + Pasteurella A&D twice prior to farrowing.
- Vaccinate pigs with similar product at 7 and 28 days.
- Administer .5 cc of LA-200 to baby pigs on day 1 and on castration day (day 7-10).
- Administer 1 cc of LA-200 to baby pigs at weaning (day 21-28).

The new protocol, which included the use of Naxcel, eliminated all vaccinations. Three of the 15 farms in the 3,500-sow complex were put on the following program:

- Inject 1 gram of ceftiofur (20 cc of reconstituted Naxcel) per sow upon entering farrowing room.
- Inject 20 mg ceftiofur (.4 cc of reconstituted Naxcel) per baby pig at birth.
- Inject 20 mg ceftiofur (.4 cc of reconstituted Naxcel) per baby pig on castration day (day 7-10)-Inject 40 mg ceftiofur (.8 cc of reconstituted Naxcel) per baby pig on weaning day (day 21-28).

Compared to previous health history, the pigs under the Naxcel program had:

- Reduced sneezing and coughing in the nursery.
- Increased weight per day of age in nursery.
- Reduction of snout scores from 3 to about 1 (0=no lesions, 5=severe lesions).
- Reduction of lung lesions from a "high" percentage (exact level not listed) to about 30 percent.

Shortly after the program was initiated, all 15 of the sow herds were included in the program, but Naxcel injections for the sows were eliminated because of cost.

I also spoke to three practitioners in southeastern Pennsylvania recently to get their comments on the product.

Field Results 2

From the first veterinarian, I learned that Naxcel has proven to be a good tool against Actinobacillus (Haemophilus) pleuropneumoniae outbreaks in grow-finish herds. Even severely affected pigs can recover when treated early enough.

His tips on the use of Naxcel:

1. If pigs in the barn affected by Actinobacillus are about the same age, inject all pigs. At least inject all pigs from the age group that are suffering from the disease, which are often in the range of 80 to 100 lb.

2. Severely affected pigs should be injected twice.

3. Inject early in the course of the disease before the onset of lung adhesions.

He also comments that it works well against Pasteurella, but it's not too effective against Mycoplasma.

Field Results 3

The second practitioner also acknowledged the effectiveness of Naxcel against Actinobacillus, but commented that if a treatment program, such as the use of penicillin, is working well now, there may be no need to switch to Naxcel.

(Note: The cost for a maximum dose of Naxcel for a 100-pound pig is about $2.25, whereas the cost for a maximum legal dose of penicillin is about a $.05.)

In the case of rhinitis problems, Naxcel can be helpful in the control of secondary problems, but more sophisticated programs such as medicated early weaning may be needed to eliminate the AR from the herd.

Field Results 4

The third practitioner also spoke highly of the Naxcel effectiveness against respiratory problems. He indicated, however, that for the treatment of Actinobacillus, other drugs like penicillin are often just as effective.

General comments on the product from these practitioners included:

1. The short storage time is a bit a problem, when producers want to keep some on hand. It can be frozen, but that's a hassle.

2. The zero withdrawal is a real benefit.

3.The low-volume dose and the low viscosity are both nice aspects

Ag Professionals Invited To Problem-Solving Contest

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — All ag professionals are invited to the Dairy On-Farm Problem-Solving Satellite Conference to be held on June 2.

The conference is open to all ag professionals who advise dairy farmers at the farm level, including consultants, feed company representatives, veterinarians, AI technicians, and millking equipment dealers.

The Bradford County Cooperative Extension Office will be serving as a down-link site for this teleconference. Registration is from 8 a.m.-8:30 a.m.

The conference is targeted at teaching ag professionals a systematic approach to on-farm problem-solving. The goal of this conference is to encourage participants to expand their thinking and work cooperatively with other ag professionals when examining farm problems.

The schedule includes five satellite segments to provide basic knowledge of farm records, animal facilities, feed storage, and other topics. Following each segment, participants will have an opportunity to apply the problem-solving principles during practice sessions. Participants will gain additional experience using group problem-solving skills while visiting a local dairy farm during the afternoon segment.

The total cost of the conference will be $30 and can be paid on June 2. This cost includes lunch and a notebook of materials from Penn State. For more information or to register, please call the Bradford County Cooperative Extension Office at (717) 265-2896.

Don't Discard Plastic Containers — Recycle Them

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The American farmer uses almost sixty million plastic containers of crop protection chemicals each year. Most of these containers go to landfills or are burned at the farm.

Lancaster County farmers are being asked not to throw away those plastic containers this growing season. Farmers are being asked to bring the containers to several convenient sites in Lancaster County to utilize/recycle containers into other uses.

The American agricultural chemical industry is the first industry in the nation to be working for programs to reduce the amount of packaging material in the waste stream. They estimate that in 1994 recycling programs in 25 states will collect over 1.3 million pounds of plastic pesticide containers at state approved sites.

The Agricultural Container Research Council (ACRC) is supporting recycling programs across the nation to collect empty containers and to find other uses for them. To date, due to the potential for residues in recycled materials, most of the plastic collected is being utilized in the generation of electricity. As research finds alternative uses and assesses the risk of residues other uses of the plastic will replace the burning.

To be acceptable for recycling, plastic pesticide containers must be empty, clean, inspected, uncapped, dry, the label must be on the container, and the containers cannot be smashed or cut up.

An empty clean container is one that has been triple- or pressure-washed. Containers will be inspected by a Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture employee before they are accepted. Caps must be removed and the container must be dry when brought to the collection site. All containers must be in tact and have a label showing its content.

The collection will be at the following locations on the dates listed:

- Henry Hoover, 1731 W. Main Street, Ephrata, PA - May 19, June 17, July 15, August 16 and November 2.
- G & G Feed and Supply, Rear 123 E. Stiegel Street, Manheim, PA - May 20, June 20, July 18, August 17 and November 4.
- Benjamin Landis, 587 Strasburg Road, Strasburg, PA - June 1, July 1, August 3 and September 2.
- Gideon King, 5465 Elam Road, Kinzers, PA - June 3, July 6, August 5 and September 3.
- Martin's Ag Service, 338 Grist Mill Road, New Holland, PA - June 9, July 8, August 9 and October 5.
- Little Britain Agri Service, 398 Little Britain Road, Quarryville, PA - June 10, July 14, August 12 and October 7.

All sites will be open on dates listed from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m.

For more information, contact the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture at (717) 787-4843 or the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension Office at (717) 394-6851. Please do not call the drop-off sites for information.

of the drug.

Summary

1. Naxcel is a relatively new injectable antibiotic now available for use in pigs. Use of the drug must be on the order of a veterinarian.
2. Although it is currently labeled only for respiratory problems due to Actinobacillus, Salmonella, Strep. Suis and Pasteurella, the drug has a broad range of activity.
3. There is no withdrawal period for the product.
4. It is expensive. If you've got respiratory problems that do not respond to more traditional treatments and herd health programs, you might consider trying Naxcel.

If the respiratory disease complex is currently under control in your herd, weigh the costs carefully and seek advice from your veterinarian before making Naxcel a major part of your program.

Enemies Of Vegetable Insect Pests May Be Beneficial

ITHACA, N.Y. — Biological control of insect pests — the use of natural enemies or "good bugs" to control the pest species — gives farmers and gardeners a safe, environmentally friendly means of pest management. But recognizing the good ones and their impact can be difficult.

A manual and companion slide program, "Natural Enemies of Vegetable Insect Pests," published by Cornell Cooperative Extension, provides gardeners, farmers, educators and extension and regulatory personnel with the information necessary to recognize insect natural enemies, conserve their numbers and enhance their ability to control pests.

Using good insects to control the pest species is known as biological control. This is one component of the pest control strategy known as integrated pest management which uses several means to control insect pests to avoid unnecessary use of conventional chemical insecticides.

However, to successfully use non-chemical, integrated, pest management strategies one must understand the basic biology of the pest insects as well as that of their natural enemies. The manual contains a general introduction to insect biology and ecology and the concept and practice of integrated pest management making the information useful regardless of crop or location.

The 64-page manual contains 85 color photographs and numerous drawings of 25 key groups of natural enemies, including insect predators, parasitoids, and diseases.

"Natural Enemies of Vegetable Insect Pests" is available for $22.50, which includes postage and handling, from the Cornell University Resource Center, 8 BTP, Ithaca, NY 14850. A slide set with abbreviated text is also available.

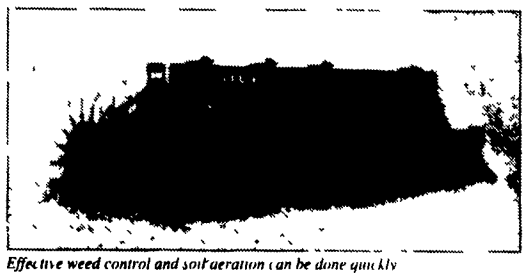
"Binkley & Hurst Bros., Your Rotary Hoe Dealer"

Rediscover The Rotary Hoe!

Farmers rediscover new uses for an old tool

Land hoe!



Effective weed control and soil aeration can be done quickly

Farmers across the country are taking a new look at an old tool, the rotary hoe Using a rotary hoe is not only a great defense against weeds, it can also help meet compliance by bringing residue back to the soil surface

Some innovative farmers have already proven the value of the high-speed rotary hoe in aerating their reduced tillage fields before planting Used ahead of planting, the rotary hoe breaks the seal or crust that may have formed in the soil This enables the soil to dry and warm up faster to give you a day or two jump in planting It also creates a mellow, uniform seedbed for better emergence

Yetter has designed new models to work specifically in heavy crop residue These new models operate in row crops or bedded plants with equal ease and without implement modifications

In many areas, growers are finding rotary hoes can help reduce wind erosion, while others are using rotary hoes to incorporate broadcasted wheat and other small grains Taking existing technology and expanding its usefulness is what makes innovators successful.

The usefulness of rotary hoes is not limited to farm fields You might be surprised, but Yetter Rotary Hoes are being used by ski resorts to break up the crusted snow on downhill ski runs

However, even with all these new ideas, don t overlook why the rotary hoe was originally built Each pass of a rotary hoe can go a long way in reducing herbicide applications by incorporating the herbicide into the weed root zone to enhance its effectiveness In fact, many preplant herbicide labels call for rotary hoeing if the weather is dry five to 14 days after application Check your herbicide labels for details

If You Need A Rotary Hoe, See Binkley & Hurst Bros. For Immediate Delivery!

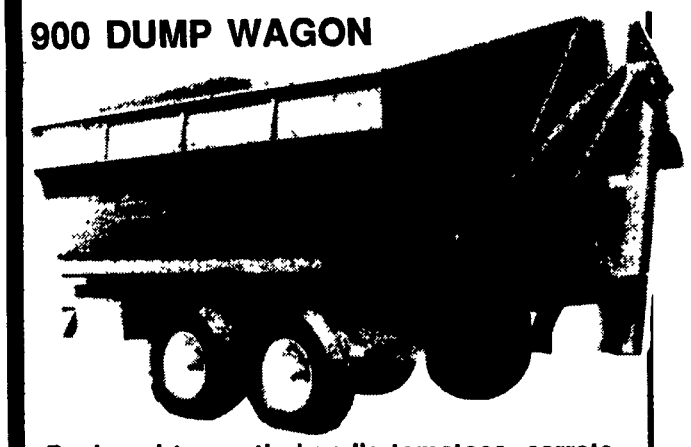
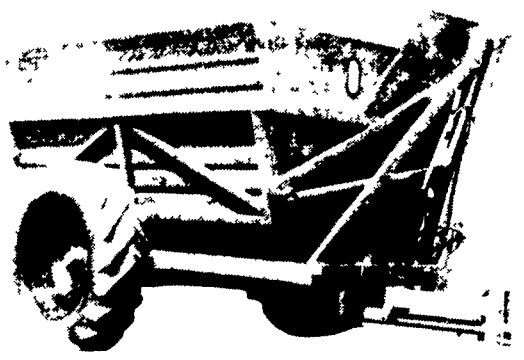
BINKLEY & HURST IS YOUR RICHARDTON DEALER - WITH EXPERIENCE TO YOUR NEEDS-CALL OR STOP IN NOW!

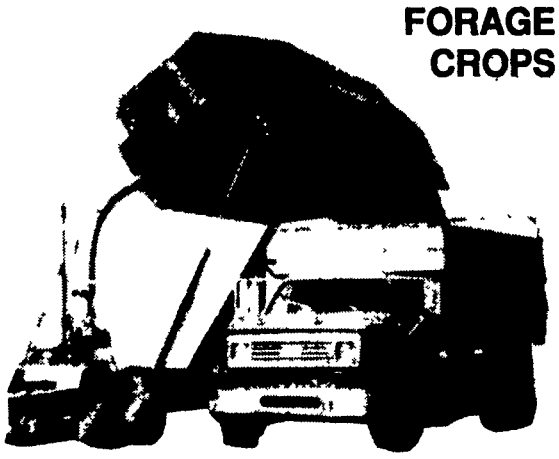
GET YOUR CROP OUT FASTER WITH THE 900 DUMP WAGON

RICHARDTON

YOU'LL NEVER FIND A BETTER FORAGE WAGON FOR SILAGE AND FORAGE CROPS







Designed to gently handle tomatoes, carrots, onions, grapes and all fruits and vegetables.

Here's real versatility. Adjust the Richardton Row Crop 900 Dump Wagon tread width from 60" anywhere up to 90" to fit various row crop widths. Adjust hitch height and length to fit your needs.

Easily convert the wagon to left or right hand dumping. Roll smoothly over the ditches and deadfurrows with oscillating walking tandem running gear.

The 900 wagon loads low to reduce crop damage, but can fill haul trucks at any height from 7', 4" up to 10', 10". A 36" wide lip with an 8" rubber apron gently guides all fruits and vegetables to the truck box center with minimum drop distance.

Put 18,000 lbs. of fresh crop in a haul truck in two minutes or less and get back to harvesting. Rugged design takes only minimum servicing and it's backed up by an outstanding warranty. That's versatility...that's the Richardton advantage!

AT LAST! A BIG, POWERFUL DUMP WAGON FOR ALL CORN AND BEET HANDLING.

Keep your trucks on the road and out of the field by harvesting directly into a big, rugged Richardton 960 Dump Wagon. Designed for producers who want big 20,000 lb. capacity, dependable, low maintenance wagons backed up by an outstanding warranty... that's the Richardton advantage.

Get a step ahead with the fast, efficient RICHARDTON 960 DUMP WAGON

Featuring 550 cu. ft. capacity/for 700 cu. ft. flared box option, low 7' or 9' loading height, 48-degree dumping angle, high variable 8'4" to 15' dumping height, rugged/minimum maintenance, adjustable ground clearance, adjustable hitch height/length, under 2-minute dumping time, optional hydraulic hitch cylinder.

• SWEET CORN • SEED CORN • EAR CORN
• SUGARBEETS • POTATOES

RICHARDTON — A Step Ahead For Farmers...

The new 700 series wagon diagonal slide system allows truck drivers close access to the dump wagon and reaches out to put loads in the center of the box. And the 45-degree dump angle makes this wagon self-cleaning.

Two models with rugged frames are built to handle either 750 cu. ft. or 1,000 cut. ft. loads.

The wide undercarriage and low profile lower the center of gravity for greater stability on hilly fields.

An adjustable offset hitch is standard to match row crop spacings and the vented roof allows straight-through air flow. Richardton double-reinforced boxes are built to handle up to 30,000 lb. loads with ease.

REMEMBER THE 3 LAWS OF HOOBER RECONDITIONED AXIAL-FLOW COMBINES...

LAW #1- (17) Years Old is not equal to (≠) WORN OUT...
Because of the simple design of the CASE IH Axial Flow Combines, they can be reconditioned by HOOBER'S expert combine mechanics to like-new condition, so they provide 2nd and 3rd owners years of satisfactory and profitable operation.

LAW #2- (4,000) HOURS PLUS (+) HOOBER RECONDITIONING EQUALS (=) YEARS OF DEPENDABLE SERVICE...
(4,000) Hours on a conventional combine usually means they'll be too much trouble to be dependable. Axial-Flow combines with (4,000) hours, reconditioned by HOOBER'S, have proven to run for years when purchased by farmers in PA, MD, DE and NJ

LAW #3- A CASE IH AXIAL-FLOW COMBINE SERVICED BY EXPERT HOOBER COMBINE MECHANICS EQUALS (=) LITTLE OR NO DOWNTIME DURING HARVEST...
When Hoober's expert combine mechanics service and repair AXIAL-FLOW combines in the off-season, they run dependably through the season.

Efficiency Is Our Newest Resource

IXL Technology Is New, Different & Better

Modern lubricants are about as good as they are going to get. So IXL solves the problem of friction and wear by treating the metal itself.

Treated metal parts are smoother, tougher, heat and wear resistant. More importantly, the friction characteristic of the metal itself has been reduced by more than 70%! This allows lubricants to do their jobs better and last longer. Which means your equipment runs better and lasts longer—much longer; as much as two or three times the manufacturer's expected "normal" life!

HOW DOES IXL ANTI-FRICTION METAL TREATMENT ACTUALLY WORK?

Simply stated, IXL is a pressure treatment for steel. Picture iron or steel as a sponge soaking up IXL when heat and pressure are applied for a period of time. IXL is actually attracted to the heat and pressure found in your engine, transmission, differential, wheel bearings and other working parts of your vehicle. The more heat and pressure developed by these parts, the faster and deeper the treatment soaks into them.

Used as directed, the IXL treatment is longlasting and there's no resin coating or bonded film which can peel or rub off; just bare metal with IXL soaked into it. There's no buildup on the metal surfaces and no change of tolerances. The treatment even remains effective if the metal is heated red hot—way beyond the point where your lubricants have failed.

Friction created by the working parts of your vehicle is always wearing away at the metal surfaces. After treatment with IXL the friction of these surfaces is reduced by 70% or more providing "bare metal" protection and allowing your lubricants to do their jobs much more efficiently. Since friction and wear are a continuous process, we recommend (based on actual use) that you always use a little more IXL when adding or changing oil. As a result, friction and wear are always kept at a minimum. And the metal parts continue to be treated while they do their work.
